Brussels Told Japanese Would Take Action 'Very Seriously.'

Japan will regard as a hostile act any Brussels conference decision to accede to China's plea for material aid, Tokyo officials assert.

'Grave Complications.'

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Nov. 17.—Japan would regard as a hostile act by the countries concerned any decision by the Brussels conference to accede to China's appeal for material aid in the Far Eastern conflict, highly placed Japanese circles said today.

If the Brussels conference of 19 countries decides upon aid to China, as asked by Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to France and conference delegate, these circles said, Japan would have to consider the situation "very seriously."

This assertion was seen as reinforcing the prediction that "grave complications" would result from the Brussels declaration criticizing Japanese action in China.

Japan might, Japanese informants said, have to exercise her "right under international law" to blockade the Chinese coast to ships of nations concerned, should the conference decide upon aiding China with supplies.

Dr. Koo interpreted the blockade threat as an attempt to scare the conference powers away from any material help to China.

"It is the Spanish situation reversed," said one Japanese. "In Spain they have set up an elaborate nonintervention committee, but in the Far East every one seems to think he has the right to interfere. We maintain it should be left to Japan and China alone."

China Turns to Italy.

Rome, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Chen Kuo Fu, chief of a special Chinese diplomatic mission, will confer Friday with Premier Benito Mussolini on a Chinese offer to purchase war supplies in Italy if Il Duce relaxes his support of Japan, it was reliably understood tonight.

Fair, Cold in D. C., After a Low of 30, Is U. S. Forecast

Brisk November winds whined a chilly prelude to winter up and down the Eastern section of the Nation yesterday and Washingtonians were warned the lowest temperature of the season might be expected before dawn, followed by fair and cold today.

A temperature sink to 30 degrees some time before daylight, the forecaster predicted. Lowest temperature this autumn was 31 on October 25.

A minimum of 38 degrees was recorded yesterday at 7 a. m. Yesterday's highest was 46 at 1:45 p. m., and the reading at 6 p. m. was 44.

Paris Seizes Arms, Bombs, Secret Forts

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 17.—Discovery of enough high explosives to blow up one-fourth of Paris and secret "fortresses" crammed with machine guns and hand grenades tonight spurred a nation-wide round-up of France's "hooded men," allegedly organizing for a rightist revolution.

Authorities charged that the hooded terrorists, known as "Les Cagoulards," received support from the Spanish insurgents and other rightist regimes.

Col. Francois de la Roque, leader of the outlawed Croix de Feu (Cross of Fire), also was suspected of having some connection with the "hooded men." One of five persons under arrest tonight was Rene Anceaux, former president of the Dieppe division of the Croix de Feu.

Police announced that they had uncovered a bomb-proof "post of command" with an elaborate system of sliding walls and secret chambers and that evidence seized there would lead to more arrests within 48 hours.

The terrorists were said by police

Third Sit-Down In Three Days At G. M. Plant

17,500 Workers Likely to Be Thrown Out of Jobs in Michigan.

By the Associated Press.

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 17.—The third sit-down strike in Michigan plants of the General Motors Corp. within three days began here tonight a few hours after the second one, at Detroit, had ended.

The latest strike began in the Fisher Body Corp. plant after the night shift reported for work. An official of the United Automobile Workers of America, saying the sit-down was unauthorized, attributed it to the workers' dissatisfaction with negotiations over the first of the three strikes.

The first strike also was in the Fisher plant. It began Monday night and ended Tuesday. The second sit-down was a short-lived one in the Cadillac Motor Car Co. plant at Detroit today.

Failure to terminate tonight's strike within a short time would leave 17,500 auto workers idle here. The Fisher plant employes 7,500. General Motors executives said the Pontiac Motor Car Co. plant here, with 10,000 workers, would be closed until Monday because of a body shortage if the Fisher strike continued.

While these labor troubles were developing, 150 members of the U. A. W. A. distributed, without molestation, union literature at the gates of the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co., in Dearborn, Detroit suburb.

William Munger, research director of the international union, blamed the new Fisher sit-down on what he said was the management's "failure to negotiate satisfactorily."

The company announced today that "four perpetrators" of Monday's sit-down would be suspended pending an investigation.

Two Kidnapers Recaptured, 3d Makes Escape

By the United Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Following the tip of an alert janitor, police today seized two of the three escaped convicts in the O'Connell kidnaping case and believed they soon would find the third, ending the East's most intensive manhunt in many years.

John Oley and Harold Crowley were cornered in a rooming house on the fringe of the city this afternoon and gave up without a struggle. Percy Geary, the third fugitive, fled from a second-story window. Captain of Detectives Russell W. Humphrey said he was convinced Geary was still in the neighborhood.

Janitor and handy man about his mother's lodging house, Ivan Whitford rushed into a precinct station and told the detectives that the men were in his place. He related how the three had ambushed him in the basement of a nearby vacant house and how he had argued them out of shooting him, taken them to his home and drunk with them until he gained their confidence. He managed to get out of the house on the pretext of buying whisky, he said.

The three men were under long prison sentences and faced transfer to escape-proof Alcatraz Federal prison in California when they broke out. They were convicted as members of the gang which kidnaped John J. O'Connell, jr., of Albany, N. Y., for a $40,000 ransom in 1933. They were also suspected participants in the $427,000 Brooklyn, N. Y., armored car robbery in 1934.

District Attorney William C. Martin of Onondaga County announced tonight he would summon a special grand jury to investigate the break. Oley and Crowley were removed to the county jail.

Jazz Band at Buckingham Ball As King Casts Pomp to Winds

Breeches for Ease, Sane Gowns for Women, New Order.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 17.—The staid dignity of Buckingham Palace's white-and-gold ballroom, where the royalty of Europe is entertained, was broken tonight by the whang of banjoes and the squeal of saxophones.

For the first time in British history a jazz band played for the royal dancers and more than 1,000 guests attended the court ball in honor of Leopold III, King of the Belgians.

The 36-year-old monarch, who arrived here yesterday, reportedly enjoyed the precedent-shattering music thoroughly—as did King George and Queen Elizabeth, who ordered it.

It was a far cry from the whistling bagpipe music with which King George V used to entertain guests and, according to most authorities on the matter, much better to dance to.

Ordinarily a military band, supplemented by a few stringed instruments, is called into service for such occasions but tonight the guests were pleasantly startled to see Marshall's orchestra, one of the best known in London, striking up lively swing music.

U. S. Employes Request Doctors to End War on 'Experiment.'

'What the Devil Do They Want?' Physician Asks, Condemning Plan.

A committee of Government employes yesterday called on the District Medical Society to drop its opposition to group medical service.

The employes, comprising the Committee for Co-operative Medical Service for Federal Employes, defended the Group Health Association, Inc., sponsored by the Home Owners Loan Corporation to provide medical care for employes.

At the same time about 100 physicians attending the fall luncheon of the Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia Medical Society in the Shoreham Hotel displayed the profession's unbending opposition to any form of socialized medicine in a sharply worded discussion. The blast of Dr. M. D. Hiden, of Warrenton, is an example:

"What the devil do they want? We give them all our time, we go out at every hour of the night, we give them the hospital of their choice whether or not it is convenient for us. What the devil do they want?"

The Government workers committee wrote an open letter to Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the District Medical Society, defending prepayment of doctors' fees and group medical practice and recommending that the HOLC organization be viewed as an experiment which should be given a chance.

On the other side of the controversy, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner and corresponding secretary of the Tri-State Society, read a "declaration of independence." It was drafted by 430 physicians throughout the country and asked the society to pass on its demand for increased appropriations of public funds for medical purposes.

Open Letter Is Read.

First, the society swiftly tabled the request. Then the barrage of words on socialized medicine began. Another example:

2 Omaha Officers Are Reduced by Courts-Martial

Secretary Swanson yesterday approved a Navy court-martial verdict lowering on the promotion list the commander and the navigating officer of the cruiser Omaha, which went aground in the Bahamas July 18.

The navigator, Lieut. Comdr. Edgar R. Winckler, convicted on the same charge, was reduced 75 numbers.

Green, Lewis Control Fate Of Wage Bill

Labor Group Refuses to Withdraw Measure for Revision.

By Sidney Olson.

Fate of wages-hours legislation at this session lies in the hands of John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, it was learned last night.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee, will meet Green and Lewis in informal conferences this week-end, it was revealed, seeking assurances from the labor chieftains that their organizations favor the present bill.

These assurances, if given, are to be used to wheel into line an estimated 80 to 90 Representatives at present unwilling to sign Mrs. Norton's petition to discharge the bill from the Rules Committee unless assured that either the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L. still favors the measure.

105 Members Sign.

At end of yesterday's turbulent House session, in which the wages-hours bill was alternately assailed and defended, 105 members had signed the petition. A total of 218 signatures is necessary before the committee is discharged and December 13 is earliest date at which the bill could then be called up on the floor.

One member of the House Labor Committee privately outlined the situation in this fashion:

"A lot of the boys are worried about which way to jump. Elections are coming up next year and they don't want to be in a spot where they helped blast this bill out of the Rules Committee and on to passage if the Federation doesn't want the bill. Some of the members that depend on the C. I. O. for backing figure the same way. Since no official word has come from either body, the members want to get Lewis and Green on the record again about the bill, since it has been revised so much and since the two groups have held their conventions.

To Avoid Red Tape.

"Now they realize that maybe Lewis and Green might be tied up by official red tape so that they couldn't speak their minds at a formal hearing.

"So the idea is to have them talk frankly and informally to Mrs. Norton. If they have any objections, she can whip them into shape as amendments to be offered from the Senate Majority Backs Profit Tax Reduction

Most Want Action at This Session; Sales and Income Substitutes Talked; House Committee Moves to Revise Law.

By Robert C. Albright.

Demands for modification of business taxes as a step toward turning the industrial slump yesterday brought new concessions from a House tax sub-committee and Senate speculation on an alternative sales tax or steepened individual income levies.

Sentiment for repeal or modification of the undivided profits tax reached a crescendo in Senate comment. A majority of the Senate was on record for downward revision of the tax, with a representative cross-section seeking action this session.

Nearly a score of Senators added their voices to those previously committed to relief from the undistributed earnings tax, as Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Caroline, appealed to the Senate "to take hold of the powers that we have and exert them" to stem the business spiral.

Repeal "Primary Duty."

"The primary task of Congress," said Bailey, "in the light of the President's message, is to repeal this undistributed profits tax. It is destructive of the credit of every corporation in America."

Other developments:

Following a luncheon conference with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, said that if more revenue is needed after modification of the undivided profits tax it might have to come from a manufacturers' sales tax or from lower income brackets.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee proposed rewriting the capital gains tax "to smooth out the abrupt rates under existing law." Chairman Fred M. Vinson said the proposed change would mean no further loss in Treasury

A seaplane base near Washington was recommended by the Maritime Commission as a phase in the development of transoceanic air transportation for which it asked to be given responsibility in a report to Congress yesterday.

Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, who submitted the report for the commission, outlined an area embracing Washington, in which he suggested the base be located. He set Baltimore as northern and Norfolk as southern limits of the area, saying ice conditions might hinder winter operations in New York.

The report was viewed as strengthening the position of backers of the Gravelly Point site on the Potomac River, below the Highway Bridge, where facilities for land and seaplanes would be available.

U. S. Assigns 6 Testers to Eat Turkey All Day; Sure, You Can Get Tired of It, They Conclude

Men have given their all to science, have staked their lives on experimental serums and undergone the bites of reptiles that antidotes might be found. And now, in another adventure of science, a group of volunteers in the Agriculture Department are eating turkey—eating turkey until turkey becomes tedious—with the threat of losing their waistlines.

It is all for science.

For the first time in taste-testing history the group, three men and three women, sat yesterday at a board and started eating turkey. Before them was a luscious browned turkey, scientifically baked by the Bureau of Home Economics. Individually, each would nibble a slice of turkey, then purse the lips reflectively, discerningly, meditatively.

Then each would take a sip of coffee, a bite of cracker, a munch at an apple. Then another taste of turkey; and the eyes would look off, searching, again meditatively and discerningly. A notation would be made on a score sheet. This score sheet had these notations: "Aroma, texture, flavor of fat, description of fat flavor, flavor of lean, description of lean flavor, tenderness, quantity of juice, quality of juice and general conclusions." The degrees of these conditions were amplified with such remarks: Desirable, neutral, tough, very pronounced, moderately pronounced, very coarse, fine, good and poor."

When the volunteers emerged from the ordeal by turkey late in the day, a spokesman for the group issued a statement. He was Rob R. Slocum, a high-ranker in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Heavy with turkey, Mr. Slocum stated: "Yes, the eating of turkey can make you tired of turkey. It keeps you from wanting any dinner; it is also very tedius when you just sit to eat turkey for many hours." He added that, withal, he probably would want some turkey for Thanksgiving or Christmas, but at the moment he didn't care about turkey. He believed these sentiments would be shared by the others:

Alfred B. Lee, Bureau of Animal Industry; Adelle Freeman, Bureau of Home Economics; Fannie Walker Yeatman, Bureau of Home Economics; Virginia Weatherby, of the bureau, and Harold E. McClure, Bureau of Animal Industry.

The taste jury was selected because "they are discriminating . . . for their ability to show good taste and judgment." Behind all the eating of turkey are many records, tracing the turkey to the farm. The records contain every detail of breeding, marketing, cooking. The final palatability test shows which of the birds was best in the mouth.

Oral Steam Keeps House Side Busy

Third Day of Special Session Finds Bills' Score at Zero.

A Senate that filibustered anti-lynching legislation to a stand-off, and a House that shadow-boxed with a program still deadlocked in committees, yesterday rounded out the third day of President Roosevelt's special session with a net achievement of zero.

While committees labored feverishly to ready farm legislation for consideration next week, Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, rose in the Senate to demand action to check the business recession in advance of the 5-point administration agenda.

"If the Congress fiddles about legislation of this sort (anti-lynching), while the country rocks as it is rocking, the people are going to lose their faith in the capacity of the Congress, and I should not blame them," shouted Bailey.

Filibuster Continued.

The North Carolinian carried into the second day the filibuster opened Tuesday against the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas. Bailey urged the Senate to postpone consideration of the bill "that we may address ourselves to this crucial (business) situation."

The House, meanwhile, with no legislation before it, blocked another leadership attempt to adjourn until Friday, and was called back today for another session with no scheduled business. Members were allowed to blow off oral steam, while the chamber waited for the farm bill.

Farm Bill Likely Monday.

But Senate leaders saw a ray of light break through the prevailing gloom of the Senate filibuster, as threatened action on the anti-lynching bill increased Southern efforts to place a farm bill before the Senate to supersede the anti-lynching measure they more strongly oppose.

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and bitter opponent of compulsory crop control, said he thought the Senate would get the farm bill Monday "for a number of reasons."

A more conciliatory stand was taken before the committee by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who recommended Senators take a "middle course" between the extremes of compulsory and voluntary control.

To Revise Cotton Bill.

For the first time, Smith failed to say he would not report a bill with compulsory cotton control features. Instead, he admitted the bill he will route to the Senate floor "will not be to my liking, but perhaps we can amend it in the Senate."

Smith urged Wallace to speed loan and subsidy payments to farmers laden with bumper, low-price cotton, and said he will introduce a bill revising the terms to permit loans and subsidies on cotton marketed after August 1.

On the other side of the Capitol, the House Agriculture Committee was quick to take Wallace's advice on a "middle course." It accepted a sub-committee recommendation for a "voluntary" cotton control program, on a tilled acreage basis. Although a decision on corn remains to be reached, the committee favors voluntary programs on wheat and

Rental Housing Need Stressed In D. C. Parley

Emphasis on residential construction for rent to moderate-income groups, instead of for sale, was the highlight yesterday of the first day of the two-day conference on the housing problem sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Bringing together approximately 300 representatives of the building trades industry, the conference was called as a forum for an exchange of ideas on ways and means of stimulating housing construction. The problem was discussed in formal addresses at two sessions, but it also was discussed informally by conferees in private conversations.

Stewart MacDonald, administrator of the Federal Housing Administration, and Charles F. Lewis, director of the Buhl Foundation, developers of Chatham Village, in Pittsburgh, took the lead in directing attention to the unexplored field of large-scale housing operations for rental purposes. Most housing conferences in the past have concentrated on seeking to encourage home ownership.

President Plans Message.

Shifting the emphasis in the housing field to construction of large projects to be rented is in line with the present efforts being undertaken by President Roosevelt and a committee of business leaders which he set up several weeks ago. This committee is seeking ways of making such projects more attractive to investors and of reducing costs which have proved a barrier to such activity. The President proposes to send a special message to Congress on this subject at a later date.

Meanwhile, Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, discussed with the Mayors' Conference the plans of the Federal Government to launch a $500,000,000 program of public housing construction for low-income groups during the next three years.

Straus, pointing out the program he is administering is solely for slum-dwellers and does not conflict with efforts of the Federal Government to revive private housing enterprise, asserted his agency would be in a position to entertain applications for projects January 1. The delay, he said, has been caused by necessity of organizing a staff and laying down a sound policy of operation.

Immediate Action Urged.

He suggested municipal housing authorities, however, might undertake now to take steps to provide the 10 per cent share of the cost of construction which the Wagner act imposes on the local housing authority so that delays after January 1 may be reduced to a minimum.

Speaking before the Chamber of Commerce group, MacDonald outlined the FHA insurance provisions for loans on rental properties and explained that amendments to the present law now are pending in Congress to liberalize and simplify these provisions further, as recently pointed out in The Washington Post.

Describing possibilities in the field of residential construction for rental purposes, MacDonald asserted "it is amazing that this tremendous market in one of our basic industries should stand all but neglected by the business men and investors of this country today, yet it offers the widest of opportunities and one of the most fertile fields for promoting general recovery in business and industry."

Conditions Changing.

"We never have directly set about building dwellings for rental to the great mass of the population," MacDonald asserted. "Apparently there has been a lack of desire on the part of private capital to make permanent investment in this class of construction. Capital has been attracted to apartments built for the well fixed by reason of the high rents paid in prosperous times or possibilities of quick sales with large profits; but the thought of making permanent long-term investment in apartment houses built for people of moderate or low incomes, and with a serious intention of staying with it, has not been given consideration to any considerable extent. Here is the market that the Federal Housing Administration intends to develop."

Lewis contended that "it is time for all of us to recognize that changing conditions of life are making ever-increasing numbers of American families want to rent their homes rather than to buy them, although he said that for persons of means there was still a place for home ownership.

"Here, then, is a new industry waiting to be created, an industry capable of producing billions of dollars in construction annually, able to stabilize year-round employment for a large part of the building trades, and competent to make a major contribution to economic and social security in the building of cities for the new day, cities composed of residential districts built and kept blight-proof by the application of principles tested and proved in other industries and other investment fields."

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Mr. Oliphant is the master mind of the Treasury. He is reputed to be Henry Morgenthau's heavy thinker, his bright boy. Most of the gaudy schemes which have come out of the Treasury in recent years, like the silver purchase plan, are attributed to Prof. Oliphant, late of Columbia and Johns Hopkins universities.

Many persons have believed that Prof. Oliphant inspired the undistributed profits tax, which now seems to be on the legislative skids—with more grease being added to the skids daily. There can be no doubt that Prof. Oliphant was one of the foremost champions of the present tax on undistributed profits and took the pride of a father in that measure.

In view of all that has happened in the last month, it would be interesting to hear Prof. Oliphant come to the defense of his brain-child. Perhaps he will get that opportunity before one of the Congressional committees. If he does, we hope he will answer the question propounded to him in the spring of 1936 by Representative Allen T. Treadway of the Ways and Means Committee.

It will be recalled that Secretary Morgenthau failed to appear before the Ways and Means Committee when it held hearings on the proposal to tax undistributed profits. Mr. Treadway wanted the views of someone high in Treasury ranks and he had Prof. Oliphant summoned. Among other questions, he propounded this one to the professor.

"What would be your views of the possibilities of another depression coming on, and, no surpluses having been accumulated by business concerns to meet that situation, how could they secure revenue with which to meet the depression? We hope it will not occur, but we have to count on it, have we not?"

"We have profited and can profit only by our past experience," replied the professor. "I can only repeat what I said, that the greatest depression in the history of the country followed the accumulation of the greatest corporate surpluses in the history of the country."

"Suppose that some of the prophecies should come true," continued Mr. Treadway, "and receiverships and bankruptcies result, with bonds depreciating, banks unwilling to make loans, investment bankers already operating the businesses they could; in your opinion, would the Government then step in and arrange for the necessary financing by the Government?"

"I should think that the Government is less likely to have to face that unpleasant alternative if by some fair tax bill of this sort we straighten out that budget picture," replied Prof. Oliphant.

It would be interesting to make a second effort to get Prof. Oliphant to answer that question, not only because he avoided it on the occasion when it was asked, but because it is a good principle of government to subject originators of gaudy, Utopian schemes to cross-examination when their ideas go sour.

Perhaps it is fairer to propound that question to Prof. Oliphant now than it was in the spring of 1936. He indicated by his reply on that occasion that he sets great store by experience and also that he did not believe that this country would experience any more depressions or industrial recessions. Of course, it would have been treason to the New Deal to think otherwise. But now, in the light of experience, what does the professor think?

And in giving the answer—we are just trying to be helpful—he might refer to past experience with greater care than he did in the spring of 1936. Unless Prof. Oliphant meant that in 1928-29 the aggregate total of corporate surpluses held was greater than ever before, as the population was greater, he made an incorrect statement.

As Dr. Benjamin M. Anderson, economist for the Chase National Bank, subsequently pointed out, the accumulation of corporate surpluses preceding the great depression was not as great as the additions to corporate surpluses in the period during and immediately after the World War.

In the years from 1916 to 1919, inclusive, additions to corporate surpluses totaled almost $16,000,000,000. In the comparable four years preceding the depression—1925 to 1928, inclusive—increases in corporate surpluses, as Dr. Anderson showed, totaled only about $8,500,000,000.

Recital of this episode is not for the purpose of levity alone. It is an illustration of the arguments used in behalf of the undistributed profits tax. The truth of the matter is that none in the Treasury or on Capitol Hill had a clear idea of the economic effects of the tax, and not much effort was put forward to find out.

Congress, however, was warned of the psychological effect of the tax. It had ample notice that it would chill business enterprise and confidence. But it rushed the tax through to enactment anyway in order to get to the Democratic National Convention. Congress then was thinking in political terms.

It is now thinking in political terms. It little knows or cares about the technical operation of the tax. What it is concerned about is that every businessman regards the tax as something unbearable and menacing to him. In the present juncture of the country's affairs it is not important whether these businessmen are right or wrong. The important thing is the way they think. Thus repeal or modification of the tax will have a psychological effect in restoring confidence—the keystone of economic progress—many times greater than the dollars and cents actually involved.

First President Would Aid Soil, Roosevelt Says

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt expressed belief yesterday that, if George Washington had lived in the twentieth century, he would have "acted boldly to keep agriculture from going down to ruin."

Obviously continuing his campaign for reversal of the Supreme Court's 1936 decision against Federal regulation and control of farm production, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"George Washington's own words . . . show that he considered agricultural production even in his time to be much more than a local matter."

Wallace Reads Remarks.

Secretary Wallace read Mr. Roosevelt's remarks at the first President's stately home, Mount Vernon. The occasion was the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Department of Agriculture and the land grant college system.

In his speech, Mr. Roosevelt said Washington had urged Congress to create a national board to promote the interests of agriculture in the first President's eighth annual message to Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt said Washington's interest in agriculture was matched by Thomas Jefferson's, but that it was not until 1839 that the First President's proposal was carried out. Under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln in 1862, he continued, the movement came to fruition when Congress established the Agriculture Department and provided grants of land to aid in establishing State colleges of agriculture.

Dr. Creel Named Head.

Dr. Cecil W. Creel, director of extension at the University of Nevada, was elected president of the Land Grant College Association.

Other officers elected were Dr. J. A. Burns, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, vice president; Thomas P. Cooper, dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, secretary-treasurer; Dean O. M. Leland, University of Minnesota, and President J. J. Tigert, University of Florida, one-year terms on executive committee; President Charles E. Friley of Iowa State College and President R. C. Dressler of Rhode Island State College, two-year terms; President C. A. Lory, Colorado State College, and Dean F. B. Mumford, University of Missouri, three-year terms, and President T. O. Walton, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, and Dean C. E. Ladd, Cornell University, four-year terms.

Dr. R. A. Pearson, former president of the University of Maryland, and Dr. A. R. Mann, former provost of Cornell University, were elected life members of the executive committee.

Garner Flees When Connally Tells Senate He 'Would Make a Great President.'

VICE PRESIDENT John Nance Garner sat placidly in the Senate chamber yesterday listening to debate, chatting now and then and watching someone else perform the duties of presiding over the Senate.

Suddenly, however, the remarks of Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, lost their savor for him. The Vice President rose hurriedly and walked rapidly from the chamber.

Deploring what he regards as a slim prospect the South can elect a Chief Executive, Connally had said that Garner "would make a great President."

As the Vice President left, Connally called after him:

"Don't let me run you out, Mr. President."

CONNALLY CONTRIBUTED additional luster to an otherwise drab first week of Congress as he continued his filibuster part of the day yesterday with references to Sir Galahad, the Holy Grail, gangster killings and Kentucky feuds.

Sir Galahad and the Holy Grail he used to point his admonition to Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, to cleanse "the blood from the hands of your own people" before pushing anti-lynching legislation. Connally said Sir Galahad after long search found the Grail on his own mantel, chiding Wagner regarding gangster killings in New York.

It was his own party leader, Senator Barkley, at whom Connally aimed his mountain feud shafts, asking if in Kentucky there is an open season for feuds or "do you have a quota system?"

And, finally, he included the entire Senate in the caustic observation:

"The rules of Draco were written in blood but the rules of the Senate are written in wind."

Delegate Samuel W. King, of Hawaii, asked Congress to order a vote on Statehood for the islands at the next election in the Territory . . . Skepticism concerning a balanced budget was expressed by Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who forecast the Government will be at least "$1,500,000,000 in the red" at the end of this year . . . On the other hand, Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, advocated issuance of $3,000,000,000 in new currency against the gold reserve to "restore prosperity immediately."

REPRESENTATIVE PATMAN (Democrat), Texas, predicted State banks will be destroyed unless they are given parity with national banks in use of the Government's credit.

Patman said in a Congressional Record statement:

"Monopoly is rearing its head in the banking business. If something is not done, the unit bank will fade out of the picture and the dual system will be destroyed."

He denied assertions Federal ownership of the Reserve banks threatens the dual banking system or would lead toward Government ownership of the entire banking system.

APPOINTMENT of Gov. Fred P. Cone, of Florida, as chairman of Jackson Day Democratic dinners in Florida was announced by Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of that State. Senator Pepper made the announcement after a conference with National Chairman James A. Farley regarding refusal of State Chairman J. B. Hodges to direct the dinners. Hodges, the Associated Press reported from Lake City, said he would not serve this year "because I cannot approve of the machinery of the Democratic Party being handed over to the American Labor Party."

Non-Partisan Milk Control Is Urged

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP).—B. H. Welty, of Waynesboro, Pa., president of the Interstate Milk Producers' Co-operative, coupled a demand for nonpartisan milk control agencies today with a warning that the organization would "fight any of their actions which might be made for political expediency."

Addressing the association's annual convention, Welty asserted "we must be sound in our demands of the control agencies and have facts to support those demands."

The organization, Welty said, has about 8,000 members in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Plans Flight to Mexico.

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky, airplane manufacturer, said today he would take off at 6 a. m. Friday in an attempt to fly the 2,225 miles to Mexico City, nonstop, at 300 miles an hour. He will travel at an altitude of 15,000 to 20,000 feet, using oxygen equipment.

Jefferson Struggle Revived by Plan to Dedicate Library

First move to revive the Thomas Jefferson Memorial controversy at the special session came yesterday in a resolution to rename the Library of Congress for Jefferson.

Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, offered the resolution to the House, pointing out that Jefferson was a scholar as well as a statesman.

He proposed an appropriation of $10,000 to provide proper markers and to finance the dedication ceremony.

U. S. Deficit Up To $702,238,089

By the Associated Press.

The Federal deficit climbed above the $700,000,000 mark in the first four and a half months of the fiscal year which began July 1, the Treasury statement showed yesterday.

On November 15, expenditures had exceeded income by $702,238,089. To keep within President Roosevelt's October 19 budget estimate for the entire fiscal year, the Treasury must hold the deficit for the next 7½ months down to $193,000,000.

Although Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, has predicted the red ink figure will be much larger than expected, Treasury officials express hope that enough money to verify their figures will pour in during the important tax-paying period next March.

Maine Governor Exults Over State's Principles

Augusta, Me., Nov. 17 (AP).—Gov. Lewis O. Barrows (Republican), in a proclamation today said Maine folk, as they prepared to observe Thanksgiving Day, should rejoice because "our harvests have been abundant . . . and we have remained true to the fundamental principles of our government."

Acret Quits Post On Coal Board in Price-Fixing Row

By the Associated Press.

Resigning from the legal staff of the Bituminous Coal Commission, George E. Acret declared yesterday a scheme by Chairman Charles F. Hosford, jr., to fix railroad fuel coal prices below production cost was at bottom of conflict within the commission.

Acret, a former commission member, said he was informed Hosford had opposed his reappointment as a member because "he was unable to handle me with respect to this question."

Although Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, had indorsed Acret for appointment to the position from which he resigned, the attorney contended McAdoo and Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, were "chiefly responsible for the almost complete breakdown of the coal commission."

McAdoo commented to reporters that he had "never interfered in the activities of the coal commission directly or indirectly."

Guffey said "the statement regarding me by Mr. Acret is so untrue and unfounded that it is unworthy of comment."

U. S. Half Mapped.

Topographical mapping of the United States, in progress since 1875, is now 47.4 per cent complete, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday said the Geological Survey's annual report to him showed.

Move for Filipino Freedom Is Denied

By the Associated Press.

Vicente Villamin, Filipino economist said yesterday he learned through "trustworthy channels" three departments of the United States Government were "co-operating on the draft of a text to give the Philippines immediate independence in accordance with President Quezon's demands."

State, War and Interior Department officials promptly denied all knowledge of the drafting of any such document.

A Filipino representative of President Quezon who could not be quoted directly said he too had heard "from a very good source" of a movement on foot to give the Philippines immediate independence.

Newspaper Riot Charge Cut; Strikers Fined $10

12 Who 'Took' Holiday Nov. 11 Put Out of CCC

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—Third Corps Area headquarters announced today that 12 Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees had refused to work Armistice Day at the Elkton (Va.) camp.

Officers quoted the men as saying that if they had been at their Virginia homes, where they worked in the coal mines, they would not have had to work that day. Officers said the men were told Army regulations did not authorize November 11 as a holiday. All of them were discharged from the camp.

Mexican Deputies Study Government Flour Plan

Mexico City, Nov. 17 (AP).—Government purchase of all flour mills in Mexico and the setting up of a nation-wide producers and consumers co-operative organization was provided for in a bill studied today by the Mexican Chamber of Deputies.

Toll Placed at 8 Lives In Sinking of Steamer

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Members of the crew of the Tzenny Chandris, Greek freighter, which sank off Cape Hatteras Saturday, said today eight men died in the disaster, instead of seven.

The eighth was a Greek who had been deported and allowed to sail on the freighter from Moorehead City, N. C., as a seaman, they said.

Wreslter Not Worker, Security Ruling Holds

By the Associated Press.

No matter how hard a wrestler grunts, groans and sweats, he is not a worker, the Internal Revenue Bureau decided yesterday. Therefore, it added, he is exempt from the social security law.

Flying Boats Called Threat To Liner Trade

Maritime Board Warns Companies to Add Planes to Fleets.

By Edward I. Folliard

Flying boats carrying 40 to 50 passengers across the Atlantic in less than a day soon will offer serious competition to the superliners, the United States Maritime Commission said in a special aircraft report to Congress yesterday.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the commission, urged American steamship companies to add flying boats to their fleets, warning not to do so "may prove quite short-sighted."

At the same time, Chairman Kennedy told Congress that, since the two are so closely related, responsibility for development of the flying boat should be placed in the hands of the Maritime Commission. This could be done, he said, by a simple amendment to the 1936 merchant marine act, extending the definition of the term "vessel" to include ocean-going aircraft.

Based on Experts' Survey.

The aircraft report, a supplement to a general report dealing with the American merchant marine, is based on a survey made for the commission by a staff of experts headed by Grover Loening, pioneer aviation authority.

"The swift advance and the increasingly impressive performance of transoceanic aviation," Chairman Kennedy reported to Congress, "makes it evident that it soon will become a tremendously important factor in our foreign commerce.

"American air services now are operating successfully over the Pacific, the Caribbean, and to Bermuda. A regular transatlantic service will be in operation shortly.

"Aircraft manufacturers now have designs for flying boats weighing 120,000 pounds, having an average speed of 175 miles per hour and with a nonstop range of 5,000 miles, capable of carrying 40 to 50 passengers from New York to Europe in 20 hours. Dirigibles already have frequently made this crossing in 48 hours.

Mauretania Record Recalled.

"Thirty years have elapsed since the old Mauretania established its Atlantic record of 5 days and 2 hours. The Normandie has succeeded in lowering that time by only 24 hours. Even if the horsepower of the Normandie were doubled—at a prohibitive expense—the time of crossing would be reduced by only half a day.

"The conclusion is apparent that aircraft soon will be a serious competitor in the overseas fast express and passenger trade, now largely served by the superliner, with the distinct possibility that aircraft eventually will displace the superliner.

With this thought in mind, Chairman Kennedy, in his recent report on the Merchant Marine, recommended that the United States not bother to build ships of the type of the Queen Mary or the Normandie. He called them expensive "window dressing" and pointed out they would make splendid targets for air bombers and submarines in time of war.

Peace Leader Doubts War in Europe Soon

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, co-president of the World Peace Conference said yesterday there was no prospect of a major European war at present, but—

"I don't think it is impossible in view of the prodigious amounts being spent for armaments. Every despotic government must convince its taxpayers of the necessity for such expenditures. Then comes some incident—like the murder at Sarajevo—and the fireworks are set off."

Wallace Ready to Set Sugar Quotas for 1938

By the Associated Press.

AAA officials said yesterday Secretary Wallace was expected to allot 1938 sugar marketing quotas soon on the basis of an anticipated domestic consumption of 6,981,000 short tons, raw value.

This compares with a consumption base of 6,682,000 on which original 1937 quotas were fixed. American consumption for the 12-month period from November, 1936, to November 1, this year, totaled 6,981,000 short tons.

Children's Sanitarium Mural in Controversy

Ruhland Riles Friends of Mother Goose Here By Condemning Nursery Mural at Glenn Dale

Mother Goose and the denizens of her fantastic, fabled nursery rhyme kingdom became the center of a sharp controversy yesterday with Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, on one side and the WPA Art Project, Dr. Daniel Finucane, superintendent of the Glenn Dale Sanitarium, and innumerable children on the other.

He branded the mural "grotesque," asserted it was not art and that it was unsuitable to the dignity of a public institution. The mural is the work of Bernice Cross, done under the WPA.

Discussion raised by Dr. Ruhland's order last night caused him to say he was willing to let the Fine Arts Commission decide whether the mural is to be or not to be.

"We are painting out at the sanitarium, now, and I just thought I would give the Mother Goose mural the blessing of a coat that would hide it," said Dr. Ruhland.

"I'm sorry sentiment has entered into this at all. It would have been better if it had been kept on an artistic plane altogether."

"The children simply love them," said the nurses.

"We hope we can save them. They may not be great art. We don't know about that. But we do know they are thoroughly enjoyed and would be missed."

"I have told Dr. Finucane and the WPA that I am willing to let an art committee decide," Dr. Ruhland said.

He specified, however, that "not just any committee of so-called artists" would do.

"The Fine Arts Commission is formed for such as that, I think," he added.

The WPA, in the meantime, was highly indignant and wondered why Dr. Ruhland suggested painting out a Government mural without Government permission.

"This is the first time such a matter has come up," declared Russell Parr, District WPA art director.

The Glenn Dale Sanitarium, formerly under the Department of Public Welfare, was transferred to the Health Department last summer.

In co-operation with doctors and public welfare officials, the WPA had plans to carry out a bit of experimenting at the sanitarium to determine relationship between art and medicine. On the ceiling of a large room where children lie on their backs while receiving some of the treatment given them at the hospital, the WPA had started a "thought-provoking piece of work." Other things were being planned and the American Federation of Fine Arts were very much interested.

Dr. Ruhland several weeks ago ordered the ceiling work stopped and all plans discontinued. Yesterday morning the final blow fell.

"I am very much concerned about the murals which have been masquerading as art. This is not the only one. The District schools have several of them. I feel very strongly about them. The most unfortunate thing of all, I think, is that as a result of these projects very young persons have gone haywire and been led to think that anything was good just if it was peculiar," Dr. Ruhland declared.

The health director asserted that he did not even know the name of the artist at Glenn Dale and that he understood the whole thing was a gift. "I don't think any money is involved, but plenty of money has been spent on such projects, as everybody knows," he asserted.

Miss Cross said she knew the work represented good child psychology.

"She worked all summer on it, and all Dr. Finucane spent was about $60 for materials. The children used to come out and watch her and forget their troubles," Parr said.

Fairy tales of the conventional sort might fit into such an institution," Dr. Ruhland declared, or even good Mother Goose." "I have great respect for good art," he said. "I like Rodin, but I think Epstein's 'Genesis' and outrage."

Sanitary Strike Ended Pending Contract Talks

1,300 Return to Jobs Today; Poll Will Determine A.F.L. Affiliation.

Thirteen hundred employees of the Sanitary grocery stores, on strike since Friday, will return to their jobs this morning as the result of an agreement reached late yesterday between John K. Keane, legal representative of the unions, and Elisha Hanson, counsel for the grocery concern.

In a joint statement the attorneys said merely that the agreement to return to work was made "pending negotiations for contracts" and these "are progressing in a matter mutually satisfactory."

As read, however, by Keane to a meeting of the strikers at 423 G street, the agreement covered the following points:

All strikers to return to work.

No discriminations to be made either by the company or by the unions.

A poll to be taken immediately, under the aegis of the Bureau of Conciliation of the Department of Labor, to determine whether a majority of the employees wish to be represented by the A. F. of L. unions.

The company to enter into contracts with the unions in the event of a majority in favor of union representation. Terms of the contracts to be the subject of further negotiation.

Separate contracts for Washington and Richmond.

Keane said that all employes on the pay roll as of November 1, but not including office and administrative workers, will be permitted to vote in the poll. The strikers accepted the agreement with a unanimous roar.

Following his conference with Keane yesterday, Hanson made the following statement concerning the company's labor policies:

"The Sanitary Grocery Co. has never had any objection to any of its employes organizing for purposes of collective bargaining. It has never attempted to influence them into joining or refusing to join a union and, now that an opportunity has been afforded for the employes to express their desire as to representation, if they express it in favor of representation, contracts will be entered into immediately."

Roberts was 40 years in active newspaper work and 32 in the service of the Associated Press. His most notable work was in covering the World War.

Widow Cleared By Coroner of Killing Mate

The fatal shooting of Carl M. Hughes Tuesday afternoon was an accident, Acting Coronor William B. Wilkins, of Alexandria, decided yesterday, absolving Mrs. Kathleen Hughes, attractive 35-year-old wife of the dead man.

Clad in black, Mrs. Hughes tearfully retold at the inquest the story of the quarrel which ended in her husband's death. Hughes blamed her for injuries their 13-year-old son, John, received Monday in a hit-run accident. Mrs. Hughes denied she was to blame, whereupon, she said, her husband attacked her with a stick.

She took her husband's gun from the dresser merely as a means of protecting herself, she said. The idea of killing him did not occur to her.

In delivering his verdict, Dr. Wilkins expressed his belief that Hughes suffered from "alcoholic mania with homicidal tendencies." The fact that he kept a gun in the house and remembered where it was hidden, even though he had been drinking heavily, indicated that he must have had "something in mind," Dr. Wilkins said.

He held, therefore, that as both Hughes and his wife had their hands on the gun at the time of the shooting, the actual explosion was accidental.

Mrs. Hughes told of giving her husband money for his bills from the grocery business she operated in their Hunters Station home. She often had thought of leaving him because of his drinking, she said, but had never brought herself to it. In response to the coroner's question as to Hughes' attitude toward their children, Mrs. Hughes said, "He hated them all."

The hearing, held in Alexandria because Hughes died in Alexandria Hospital, will be followed by a preliminary hearing in Fairfax County, where the shooting occurred. The date has not been set. Mrs. Hughes, who is charged with "felonious shooting, resulting in death," was released Tuesday night on $2,500 bond raised by her friends.

None of Mrs. Hughes' five children was present at the inquest. John, still in a serious condition at Alexandria Hospital, has not been told of the tragedy.

His family has requested the hospital not to let him see reporters.

19 Held in Student Riots.

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 17 (AP).—Nineteen students were arrested and several injured today when police halted an anti-Semitic demonstration by several hundred Budapest University students.

School Board Cuts Size of Diplomas Virtually in Half

Washington's public school graduates will get streamlined diplomas this year, the Board of Education decided yesterday.

New certificates, to be ordered soon, will be 11 inches high and 15 wide—slightly more than half the size of those awarded in past years.

Board members accepted Superintendent Frank W. Ballou's recommendation that the size be cut, but one trustee thought the new models still to cumbersome.

"If we're going to reduce the size," said Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, "let's get diplomas that can be conveniently put in a folder."

Mrs. Raffray Shopping For Her Wedding Gown

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Kirk Raffray, who will marry Ernest A. Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor, started shopping for her trousseau today. Date of the wedding "some time in the next two weeks," still was unannounced. They planned to sail for London two weeks from today.

Profits Tax Cut Aim of Majority In the Senate

revenue if capital transactions are "accelerated," as is hoped.

Senators Homer T. Bone and Lewis B. Schwellenbach (both Democrats), of Washington, liberal Administration supporters, urged undivided profits tax revision this session, and, if that is impossible, retroactive action at the January session to provide refunding of part of this year's burden.

Another strong Administration supporter, Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, declared "it ought to be modified now," and Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, consistent New Dealer, commented in like vein: "It should be done right away."

Issue Raised on Floor.

"The President isn't holding us back," said Minton. "We are perfectly free to go to work on it at once. The benefits claimed for the tax do not compensate for the hardships it works on small business."

Later, Minton interrupted Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, in the Senate to say:

"What is preventing the Congress from doing just the things which the Senator from Vermont suggests? The White House has not said that it should not be done or could not be done. What is to prevent the Congress from proceding?"

Bailey raised the issue on the floor of the Senate for the first time, insisting "at least" that Congress adopt a resolution declaring its sentiment for business tax modification, to reassure business. Bailey said the situation is "more desperate than many of us think." He said there had been a loss of $30,000,000,000 in values of securities on the stock exchange alone. He said an "immense credit backlog" he estimated at between "$150,000,000,000 or $200,000,000,000" has been impaired.

"It is not the fault of the President, oh, no; the fault rests right here," declared Bailey. "It will be in the public mind a most disgusting gesture for the Congress to sit here and fiddle away with legislation of this sort (antilynching), unconstitutional, as many of us think, futile as more of us think, unnecessary as many of us think."

Senator Harrison, on leaving Secretary Morgenthau, suggested the sales tax or lowered exemptions on individual income taxes might be the only alternatives "if" modification of the undivided profits tax forces a new search for revenue.

Vinson Proposes Change.

But Harrison made clear that he is opposed "to additional taxes." He reiterated there is no prospect of tax revision, in his opinion, until the regular January session of Congress. At that time he said he would favor modification of the undivided profits tax.

On the House side of the Capitol Chairman Vinson, of the House Tax sub-committee, said his group favored rewriting of the capital gains tax to give individual taxpayers the right to pay their capital gains taxes either strictly on capital gains, apart from other income, or to follow the present system of lumping capital gains with ordinary income. The proposed schedules would leave 100 per cent of first year capital gains fully taxable, as at present.

It was the sub-committee's second proposed modification of the capital gains tax. A prior concession would give taxpayers the right to carry over losses for one year, to be applied against capital gains. The subcommittee also has proposed exemptions of all corporations earning $5,000 or less a year, from the undivided profits tax, and loss carryover provisions for those who have to pay this tax.

While the new capital gains tax schedule has not been perfected, it would provide that in a case where a taxpayer desired to treat his capital gain as separate and apart from his other income, the maximum tax to be applied at the end of the second year would be 30 per cent; at the end of the third year, 25 per cent; at the end of the fourth year, 20 per cent, and at the end of the fifth year, 16 per cent.

Majority Is Heavy.

If he did not want to have his capital gains treated as separate income, and should decide to follow the present system of lumping his gains with his ordinary income taxable at the normal and surtax rates, the amount taxable beginning with the second year, would be progressively reduced 2 per cent a month, or down to 76 per cent at the end of the second year. Beginning with the third year, the amount of the income from capital gains that is to be taxable would be reduced 1 per cent a month, bringing it down to 64 per cent at the end of the third year. This 1 per cent a month reduction would be continued on to the end of the fifth year, when 40 per cent of the gain would be taxable. With respect to taxation of capital gains held for only one year, there would be no change in the present law.

Under the present law, 100 per cent of the capital gain is taxable when held for only one year; 80 per cent when held for two years; 60 per cent when held from two to five years; 40 per cent when held from five to ten years, and 30 per cent when held for ten years or more.

Meantime, crystallizing Senate sentiment showed a heavy majority of that chamber for modification of the undivided profits tax, and a strong bloc of these favors action being forced by the Senate, through a "rider" on other revenue legislation, if the House fails to act.

Senate comment yesterday, together with prior commitments, established 18 members of the 20-man Senate Finance Committee (which handles Senate tax legislation), as favoring modification in some degree of the undivided profits tax.

The only two members of the Senate Finance Committee not already on record are Senators La Follette (Progressive, Wisconsin, who indicated he is willing to consider changes, and Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, who has not returned to Washington.

A score of Senators yesterday expressed their views on proposed modification or repeal, only two or three of whom took a hesitant stand.

Of Senators commenting yesterday, Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico; Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Pepper (Democrat), of Florida; Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan; Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts; Schwellenbach and McAdoo favored either repeal or modification at this session. Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, suggested modification next session; Barkley thought it improbable at this session, and Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut; Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, all inclined to thorough study before action, with Maloney saying "I'd like to see it modified." Bone was for repeal or revision "as soon as possible" and Senator Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, said most of her constituents favored modification, while Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, was for modification "if we are going to depart from the agenda" for such bills as the antilynching bill.

Chairman Marvin Jones said "a middle course will mean much more to the farmers and the Nation than extreme measures."

Despite the mountain of farm controversy remaining, the ever-normal granary bill alone of the five measures on the President's agenda appeared definitely headed toward early consideration. The wages and hours bill continued in House deadlock, and the regional planning and antitrust proposals remained snugly tucked in special session pigeonholes.

The Government reorganization bill, which Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, has fruitlessly tried to call up in the Senate, encountered a major obstacle yesterday in organized labor opposition.

The American Federation of Labor's legislative conference asked postponement of House and Senate Government reorganization measures until the January regular session "to protect the interest of Government employes."

Delay Is Urged.

"It was the consensus of opinion," read a statement by the federation, "that action on Government reorganization should be deferred until the regular Congressional session because such measures require careful study and the brief special session already has a crowded calendar of emergency bills."

House leaders already had decided to take no further action until the Senate acted on the omnibus (Byrnes) reorganization measure. The House already has passed two sections of the four-point bill, one of these points being reorganization powers for the President. House strategy calls for sending the bill to conference after it passes the Senate, without acting directly on the remaining Civil Service and General Accounting Office reorganization features of their split-bill program.

Asks Trade Aid First.

Senator Bailey's demand in the Senate that Congress let the antilynching bill and the agenda measures wait so that it may take steps to prevent further recession in business, followed renewal by Connally of the filibuster against anti-lynching legislation.

Connally assailed constitutionality of the anti-lynching measure, and challenged motives of those sponsoring the bill. He said Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, was "angling for Negro votes" and called the New Yorker "our chief labor agitator," adding "John L. Lewis is just a pupil of Wagner."

Bailey told the chamber he was "pleading for the United States Senate to address itself to the most serious experience (business recession), since the President took his oath of office in 1933." He said "failure to meet this situation may be fatal to the dearest hopes of every home in the land."

"Here we are fiddling over a useless act, while the income of the people is being taken away from them," said Bailey. "We are fiddling while Rome burns."

Bailey said "the primary necessity today in America is the national policy that will encourage business," adding that "we are not going to get out of this situation by borrowing more funds or by the old artificial means."

President Stays in Bed With Fever From Tooth

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt still had a slight temperature from an infected tooth yesterday and doctors ordered him to stay in bed. All engagements, including a press conference postponed from yesterday, were canceled for the second successive day.

White House officials reported the President had a restful night after a sleepless Monday night. Lieut. Comdr. Arthur H. Yando, Navy dentist, treated the ailing tooth again this morning and when Capt. Ross T. McIntyre, Navy physician, found the slight fever continuing from yesterday, he ordered his patient to remain in bed. The dentist wishes to save the tooth, if possible.

D. C. Mother Begs Missing Girl To Come Home and Be Forgiven

Alice Johnson, 16, Vanished After Starting to School Tuesday.

ALICE LORENA JOHNSON.

A Washington mother, sleepless and worried over the safety of her 16-year-old daughter, missing since Tuesday morning, made a plea yesterday to the girl, "wherever she may be to hurry home for forgiveness."

The young girl, Alice Lorena Johnson, a sophomore at Western High School, left her home at 2201 Hall place northwest, at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday, apparently on the way to school.

"We know of no reason why Alice should have left home," Mrs. Elsie Johnson, the mother, said. "But I don't want her to be afraid to return; we want her."

Recently, according to Myrta Johnson, a sister, the missing student had inquired of a local bus company about the rates to Richmond, Va. The family has no relatives or friends in that city, however, they said.

When the girl disappeared she was wearing a brown suit, brown suede shoes, a camel hair coat and no hat. Her father is Clifford L. Johnson, a Community Chest official in Clarksburg, W. Va.

floor. If they don't have any, fine and dandy."

He was asked what would happen if the assurances are not forthcoming. He said: "Then you'll never see that petition signed up."

Indications were that both Lewis and Green will cheerfully meet with Mrs. Norton to confer about the bill. A federation leader stated that in his belief the A. F. of L. is generally satisfied with the bill, except for certain clarifying amendments.

A. C. I. O. spokesman said however, that Lewis believes the bill to be inadequate in that "it doesn't cover enough people" and that the proposed minimums "aren't high enough." Lewis also thinks, the spokesman said, that there is great danger the propoed minimum wages will become maximum wages.

Neither the federation nor the C. I. O. is opposed to the belief of Mrs. Norton that the proposed Labor Standards Board should be placed under the Department of Labor, it was learned.

Developments yesterday came shortly after John O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, declared:

"I will have an announcement of importance to make next Tuesday."

He added: "That will be after certain conferences have been held."

He was asked, "Do you mean after conferences with labor leaders?" O'Connor said "Yes."

The Labor Committee, meanwhile, held a session yesterday at which the full membership of 21 was present. With only two dissenting votes, the committee agreed to have Mrs. Norton issue this statement:

"The committee is unalterably opposed to any effort to bring the wages-hours bill back to the Labor Committee for reconsideration."

Mrs. Norton told reporters:

"Our job now is to get that petition signed and the bill before the House. Unless we have a lot of fibbers about, we shouldn't have any trouble in getting the measure signed. The House majority leader, Sam Rayburn, publicly promised to sign the petition. I'm not going to ask Rules Chairman O'Connor to sign it, since his committee is against it."

This price story packs a thrill!

A NEW chapter has just been added to the 127-year-old story of Old Overholt, today's "best seller" among American bottled in bond whiskies.

It tells of a price reduction that brings the cost of this rich, robust rye down to where you need not punish your purse to please your palate.

It means that now you can drink American whiskey at its notable best—without paying a premium for your enjoyment.

It puts in your glass straight 100 proof whiskey that's been distilled in the United States, aged in the United States, and bottled in bond under the supervision of the U. S. Government—the strictest whiskey standard in the world.

For today, this whiskey is being released from bond in sufficient quantities to justify the new low price now asked for this celebrated Pennsylvania straight rye.

15% Rate Rise Is 'Imperative,' Rail Head Says

Federal Control Will Be Alternative to Boost, Jeffers Warns.

The Nation's Railroads.

William M. Jeffers, Union Pacific president, said at Chicago, a 15 per cent railroad rate increase is "imperative" if Federal control is to be avoided.

Senator Borah offered a resolution stating it would be improper for Congress or other sources to attempt to influence the Interstate Commerce Commission during its consideration of the rate increase.

Asks Rate Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Approval of the application for a 15 per cent freight rate increase, which the railroads have filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, is "imperative" if the railroads are to maintain their competitive position and avoid Federal control, William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific, said today.

"The application might well have been framed as an application to partially restore rates previously in existence," Jeffers told the National Industrial Traffic League, "for it is an anomalous situation that notwithstanding the rapid advance in prices of manufactures and agricultural products since 1929, the average revenue per unit of service rendered by the railroads has consistently declined, and the class of service furnished has been greatly improved.

"The amazing thing is that the transportation systems have not broken down before. American railroads are obviously the victims of a squeeze play."

Borah Takes Stand.

A resolution declaring it to be the sense of Congress that "it would be highly improper" for Congress or any other source to seek to influence the Interstate Commerce Commission in its consideration of railroad requests for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, was offered in the Senate yesterday by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho.

"Until the commission has rendered its decision," the Borah resolution continued, "all parties interested should content themselves with presenting the facts and the law to the commission in an orderly fashion."

The resolution also said that the decision of the commission "should in the fullest degree be free from political influence" and that "any attempts to influence" Commission action "must necessarily result in disparaging the efficiency and worth" of that group.

Bond Sale Criticized.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri criticized yesterday as "rank speculation of the poorest kind" purchase of Missouri Pacific Railroad bonds by two investment trust companies at about the time the companies joined in forming a bondholders' protective committee.

Truman referred to what he said was a 50 per cent increase in the holdings of Tri-Continental Corporation and Selected Industries, Inc., in Missouri Pacific general mortgage bonds between June and December of 1933.

The railroad went into receivership in March, 1933, and a general mortgage bondholders' committee was formed during the summer of that year.

E. C. Delafield, of New York, chairman of the protective committee, told the Senate Railroad Finance Investigating Committee that J. & W. Seligman & Co., new York banking firm, represented the band holdings of the two investment trust firms on the protective group.

Truman, acting chairman of the Senate committee, asserted members of the bondholders group were "supposed to be protecting these bondholders when they go on these committees, yet they go into some poor widow's estate and get these bonds at way below par in an effort to make a profit out of them."

Delafield declined to concede that purchase of the bonds by the Investment Trust companies was "speculation."

"Backfire" Questioned.

Sanford Freune, counsel for the Delafield committee, testified the committee was willing to "go along" with a debtors' plan for reorganizing the insolvent road if other interested parties agreed to it and it was approved without substantial change by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Senate committee examiners asked Delafield to explain a letter which he wrote to William Wyer, treasurer of Missouri Pacific, February 10, 1937, in which he told Wyer he had "started a backfire along the line you and I talked about."

Delafield said the "backfire" referred to his efforts to induce other groups of creditors to come to an agreement on a plan of reorganization for the railroad.

H. D. Gibson, president and chairman of the Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York, testified his bank became trustee for Missouri Pacific first and refunding bonds in 1935 with the assistance of O. P. Van Sweringen, chairman of the board of Missouri Pacific. Earlier testimony showed a committee representing holders of the first and refunding bonds opposed the appointment.

Gibson said his "appreciation" for the help of the Van Sweringen interests in obtaining the trusteeships did not influence him favorably toward the debtors' plan for reorganizing the railroad.

The New York banker testified that shortly before obtaining the trusteeship, Manufacturers Trust lent $3,250,000 to Mid-America Corporation, a Van Sweringen holding company, for the purpose of acquiring stock in Alleghany Corporation.

Lawyer Freed In Appeal Faces 4 New Counts

Jury Reindicts Laughlin; Doctor, Aide Held for Fatal Operation.

Charges of larceny, embezzlement, larceny after trust, forgery and uttering, and presenting a forged paper to Assistant United States Attorney Harry L. Underwood were placed against James J. Laughlin by the District grand jury in four indictments yesterday.

Laughlin, an attorney and father of five children, had previously been tried on two indicements for larceny, embezzlement, larceny after trust and forgery and uttering, and found guilty in District court, but the conviction was set aside by the United States Court of Appeals because improper testimony was permitted to go to the jury.

Both the older indictments still are pending and with the four yesterday, six are awaiting trial now. All arise out of transaction in which Laughlin allegedly failed to account for some $2,800 which three clients gave him to procure release on bail from District Jail.

Doctor Is Named.

Among other indictments returned yesterday was one that charged Edwin Heaton Bruce, 29-year-old clerk, with robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon on Harry Gildenhorn, proprietor of a store at 4400 Georgia avenue northwest. Bruce is alleged to have obtained $25. In addition, the indictment recited, he shot Paul Stanish, 4520 Fourteenth street northwest, who chased him out of the store.

Nine men and women, arrested six months ago for petty infractions of the narcotic laws, were indicted, and Arthur W. Minor, 24, a substitute mail carrier, was charged with stealing a letter containing $3.50 from the mails.

Illegal operation charges were preferred against Dr. Clarence A. Wright and Mamie Hammill, who were alleged to have operated on a young girl who died in Alexandria, Va.

Others Indicted.

Others indicted were Eston U. Davis, Henry C. Millner, Guy H. Brooks, Raymond V. White, Aubrey B. Hayward, Franklin B. Pettit and William W. Green, joy-riding; Lanfer Garlington, Edward Botts, William A. Brooks, Charles Fields, Vernon Cogbill, housebreaking; John F. Brown, Mark A. Kollock, Jesse E. Stewart, Arthur Heffner, John Gaines, LeRoy King, Albert Beasley, Marion Johnson, William Foster and Edward Collins, grand larceny; Joseph Jackson, larceny from the District of Columbia; Charles P. Beal, Russell Jones Joseph Fox, Daniel N. Blackwell, Emory R. Scott, William W. Green, Henry G. Scott, Flemming Minor, William W. Green, Henry G. Scott, David A. Jenkins, robbery; Alphonse Harris, Alfred Davis and Walter J. Haynes, assault with intent to commit robbery and attempted robbery; John L. Gray, embezzlement; Joseph Howard Boteler, Roger Williams, Lawrence Thomas, Joseph P. Nealine, Ralph Marcontini, Constance Marcontini and Robert Walker, violation of the liquor-taxing act of 1934.

George William Landon, Romolo Joseph Gentilucci, Joan Brandon, Howard Ferguson, Hugh Leslie Bryan, Lawrence E. McNally, Florence Green, Gladys Russell and Margaret Sweeney, narcotic charges; Harold Eugene Jenkins, bigamy; Kenneth C. Rogers, forgery and uttering; Minter Wiggins and Francis A. Bowser, assault with a dangerous weapon; David Austin, assault with intent to kill and assault with a dangerous weapon; George E. Clark, Joseph I. Bailey, Michael William Donahue, Clifton Charles Hemsley, Meyer Shuman and Frank Leo Shuman, gaming charges.

Temperance E. Wright, assault with intent to commit rape; Wesley B. Prather, violation of section 317, title 18, U. S. Code; Edward Collins, Edward Johnson and James Broom, manslaughter; William J. Marshall, second degree murder.

Night Parking Ban Expected by Sultan

An ultimate night-parking ban on congested residential and downtown streets was predicted yesterday by Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan.

With a recent Court of Appeals ruling paving the way, the Commissioners now have undisputed authority to enforce any street restrictions they see fit.

"The time is fast approaching," said Sultan, "when it will be necessary to prohibit year-around night parking on congested highways throughout the city. We may find that we should apply such an order at once to certain sections of the city as a means of facilitating traffic movements during morning and evening rush-hour periods."

Catholics Honor Cardinal Bisleti

The Marchesina Elena Bisleti, grandniece of the late Cardinal Cajetan Bisleti, represented her family at services in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception of Catholic University Tuesday for her great-uncle, benefactor of the university.

Requiem mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, in the presence of the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States. The Rev. Dr. Louis H. Motry, dean of the School of Canon Law at Catholic University, assisted, and the Rev Dr. Francis Mullin and the Rev. Martin J. Higgins were deacons of honor. The Rev. Dr. Edward G. Roelker was master of ceremonies.

The mass was attended by trustees of the university, assembled for their semiannual meeting; the faculty, students, members of the religious houses at the university and officials of the Italian Embassy.

Expert Suggests Sit-Down Strike Of Master Sellers

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—A sit-down strike of the 21,000 men who direct the selling end of American industry was proposed yesterday by Kenneth M. Goode, market research consultant, as the way to better distribution of goods and wealth.

"Without these 21,000 master salesmen business would jam. What would the strike be for?" Goode asked at an American Institute symposium.

"First, recognition that American businessmen must turn over the working capital of the country, at a profit, twice a week, 100 times a year.

"Second, that they must keep moving, in an unbroken chain, a fresh load of 100,000 freight cars each day.

U. S. Extends Pact With Ship Agents

The extensions cover voyages begun on or before next June 30, when the commission expects to have ready its recommendations as to disposition of the lines.

Bennett Wins Worcester Mayoralty on Recount

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 17 (AP).—William A. Bennett (Republican), was elected Mayor of Worcester, defeating Mayor John Sullivan (Democrat) by 96 votes in a recount of the municipal election completed yesterday. The final figures were Bennett, 35,864; Sullivan, 35,768. On election night, November 2 Sullivan apparently had been re-elected by 25 votes. Sullivan said he would appeal.

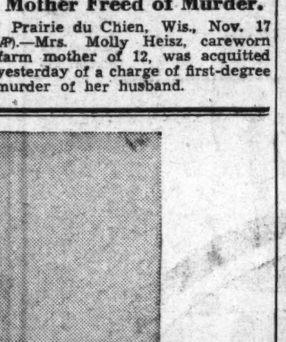
A Free Re-bid.

As most players know, an opening bid may be made on a hand which is only slightly above the average strength. When the opening bidder freely rebids his hand, however, he shows considerably more strength than is required or a minimum opening bid. This is particularly true when the opponents have displayed a strong hand, and when his partner has given no indication of support. Note how this principle influenced North's bidding in the hand below.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	2 ♣
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's takeout double was a little skimpy but he did not want to let his vulnerable opponents win the auction uncontested. North properly passed to await developments. East, of course, had to respond to the takeout double and did so in the stronger of his two shabby four-card suits. It was at this point that South displayed his considerable reserve strength by rebidding two spades. Relying on South for the strong hand his free bid had advertised, North raised, South then went to game.

West opened the Queen of clubs, and South correctly checked his impulse to take the trick at once. The club continuation was taken by the Ace, and South drew two rounds of trumps. Hearts were now attacked, and West was powerless to defeat the contract. South could not be prevented from obtaining a diamond discard on dummy's extra heart.

Had South taken the first trick with the Ace of clubs, there would have been a different story to tell. When West took his Ace of hearts he could have given his partner the lead with the King of clubs. A diamond return through declarer's King would have then brought in the setting tricks.

6,000 Mi. in 45 Hrs. African Hop Mark

Cape Town, Nov. 17 (AP).—Flying Officer A. E. Clouston and Mrs. Betty Kirby-Green set a new record of 45 hours yesterday for the 6,000-mile flight from London.

They landed here, after touching at Johannesburg, in just over 40 hours from London, clipping more than 12 hours from the record of 2 days 4 hours and 56 minutes set by C. W. A. Scott and Giles Guthrie last year.

The New London-Cape Town record was 33 hours and 29 minutes faster than the mark set by Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison in a solo flight in May, 1936.

Clouston and Mrs. Kirby-Green prepared to take off immediately for a return flight to London in an attempt to break the round-trip record of 7 days, 22 hours and 46 minutes, still held by Mrs. Mollison.

Mayors Warn Against Politics In Federal Aid

December Job Study, Report to Congress Voted as Session Adjourns.

Calling for universal co-operation for solution of the unemployment problem and warning against use of the issue for political purposes, the United States Conference of Mayors adjourned yesterday after a three-day session at the Mayflower Hotel.

By unanimous vote, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York was re-elected president of the conference. The present staff of officers, with two exceptions, was also renamed for another term.

The unemployment declaration, proposed by LaGuardia, stressed gravity of problems confronting the Nation's jobless and warned:

To Report to Congress.

"This is too serious a problem to be used as a political bludgeon for any person or party, but cries out to every red-blooded American for solution."

Lengthy discussion of the country's relief situation brought a final vote to direct the conference's executive committee to conduct a survey of conditions in December and report its findings and specific recommendations to Congress in January.

Delegates predicted demands for increased Federal relief funds would result this winter "unless the business recession ends." It was further reported that efforts will be made to seek establishment of the Federal Relief Administration on a permanent, long-range basis.

If the relief load continues to increase, the city executives forecast, the WPA will be forced to increase its employment quotas in affected areas and a deficiency appropriation will be necessary to provide funds.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, however, told the mayors Tuesday he hoped to make the current appropriation of $1,500,000,000 last until June 30.

A resolution was adopted calling upon warring factions of the American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization to re-establish peace "in the interest of labor, industry and the general public."

Airport Aid Asked.

Charging that aviation has been made a "political football," the conference adopted another resolution urging Federal aid in construction of municipal airports.

Earlier in the day, mayors heard Nathan Straus, administrator for the United States Housing Authority, describe slum clearance and low-cost housing projects.

"To build 100,000 or more minimum-cost homes within the meaning and intent of the Wagner-Steagall bill and to build them within three years," said Straus, "is at best not a simple or easy task.

"When the bill first became law," he continued, "we were told it was impractical and unworkable. In my belief, it is not unworkable on one hand. But on the other hand, we must admit that it has not yet worked. Until it does, let us apply ourselves earnestly to the task of making it work."

In addition to LaGuardia, officers of the conference re-elected were Mayor Edward J. Kelly, Chicago, vice president; Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore, treasurer; Paul V. Betters, executive director. Mayors Ross D. Rogers, Amarillo, Tex.; Angelo J. Rossi, San Francisco; Harold H. Burton, Cleveland, and Charles Dunne, Providence, R. I., were named trustees.

Mayors Burton and Dunne succeeded Mayors Frederick W. Mansfield, Boston, and Neville Miller, Louisville, who are retiring from public office.

Seal Made Treasurer.

At the annual meeting of the Institute of Municipal Law Officers, affiliated with the Conference of Mayors, Barnet Hodges, corporation counsel of Chicago, was elected president.

Other officers chosen by the group included Joseph W. Anderson, city attorney for Chattanooga, Tenn., vice president; Elwood Seal, corporation counsel of the District, treasurer; John A. McIntire, of the faculty of George Washington University Law School, executive director; Jerome I. Meyers, city solicitor of Scranton, Pa.; Frank S. Grant, city attorney of Portland, Ore.; John H. Sebrell, city attorney of Norfolk, Va.; Walter J. Mattison, city attorney of Milwaukee, Wis., and Raymond J. Kelly, corporation counsel of Detroit, trustees.

Dr. Ballou Sees Heavy Exodus From District

Blames Decline in School Enrollment on Families That Moved Away.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, told the Board of Education yesterday he believes an unusually heavy exodus of families from the District recently accounts for a decline in school enrollment here this year.

Approximately 3,000 pupils have moved out of Washington since last June, the superintendent reported.

"Various school officers have expressed the opinion that there has been a considerable number of families leaving the city," said Dr. Ballou. "Some of them, at least, were on relief during last year."

Latest enrollment figures show, however, that the 93,423 pupils in school on November 11 number 26 fewer than were enrolled the corresponding date last year. Most of the other reports taken during the fall have revealed a similar decrease in school attendance.

The superintendent said he was to make a check on pupils admitted to the local system since the beginning of the year to determine if more pupils left the schools in the last six months than entered them.

At the same meeting Dr. Ballou reported that the large enrollment of nonresident pupils in District schools has tended to increase registration. As a result of court orders directing school officials to admit any pupil living outside the District if the parents are employed here, 2,245 nonresidents are now in classes. This is 395 more than were registered last year.

Largest number of nonresidents come from Maryland. A total of 1,634 are enrolled from that State. Only 575 come from Virginia.

Following a committee recommendation, the board rejected approval of a WPA recreational project in which Federal workers would be assigned to duties within the Community Center Department.

Criticizing failure of WPA officials to clearly explain details, of Robert A. Maurer, board vice president, declared: "How can we approve this arrangement when we don't know what it is all about?"

The plan was suggested by Mrs. Mary A. Steele, WPA District director of the division of women's and professional projects.

Ex-Senator Dill's Wife Appeals Suit

Ashland, Ohio, Nov. 17 (AP).—Ohio's Fifth District Court of Appeals took under advisement today the appeal of Mrs. Grace Dill from a $5,000 alienation of affections judgment awarded her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Margie Heaton Dill.

Mrs. Margie Dill brought suit for $25,000, alleging her mother-in-law and her uncle by marriage, former Senator Dill of Washington State, sought to estrange her from Wendell Dill, whom she married in 1934, the day after their graduation from high school. Dill described the suit as "an attempt to extort money" from him.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Teamed With Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland Classic Actor Proves Sterling Comic; "E. de S. M." Drops in for Visit; "Firefly's" Midnight Premiere; Deadline for Playwrights; Notes of the Theater.

HAD it not been for his unexpectedly comic performance in "Stand-In," Leslie Howard's humorous portrayal of the role of Basil Underwood in "It's Love I'm After" would come as a merry surprise to audiences that will view the picture on the screen at the Earle Theater beginning tomorrow. As it is, he already has taken on considerable stature as a comedian by leading with his chin and being bopped in the eye with a tomato in the earlier release. However, that stature is lent added dimensions by this later assignment—later, at least, on a local screen.

BELL.

It is a totally different kind of comedy that the heretofore austere Mr. Howard interprets in "It's Love I'm After." He is cast as a Shakespearean matinee idol in a farce that partakes lightly of a taste of classicism by reason of the frequent quotations from the Bard that have been written into the script by Casey Robinson—not merely a familiar line or two, now and again, but whole scenes from "Hamlet," "Othello," "The Taming of the Shrew" and the like. It is a clever and a novel touch that adds substance to a riotous love story that might have been "just another one of those things" without it.

In view of the deftness of its writing, as well as the skill of its playing by Mr. Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Eric Blore, Patric Knowles and the rest, "It's Love I'm After" becomes a comedy of genuine distinction—not perfect, but unusual, adroit and consistently amusing.

There may be just a shade too much of Mr. Blore as a ubiquitous "gentleman's gentleman," but, after all, his unhappy lot provides the mainspring for many of the most hilarious scenes, so perhaps there couldn't be too much of him. In fashioning this character, the author evidently has surrendered somewhat to an insistent temptation to outdo Mr. Pelham Granville Wodehouse as a creator of droll and overprivileged valets. If that was his idea, he has met with eminent success, at least in the matter of maintaining Digges' almost continuous presence on the scene of action. In the large view, this Digges is a very funny fellow.

There is a unique quality in the compounding of "It's Love I'm After" that kept the drama desks and several of the Warner executives, who had seen it more than once before, in constant and uninterrupted good humor yesterday. Frequently they rattled the lighting fixtures of the projection room with the explosive force of laughter that had its origin well below the diaphragm. Since this group is, in final analysis, "an average audience," it might be well for the Earle management to shore up its walls against the coming of Friday's crowds to see the picture. One realizes now why Life made it the "Picture of the Week" in a recent issue. There has never been another quite like it.

But why has Leslie Howard been masquerading as a classic actor all these years, when he is such a completely competent comedian? I'm asking you.

• • • •

Eddie Melcher is back. No sooner had we doffed the brand-new second-hand hat and peeled off what the moth left of the coat, following yesterday's peak at "It's Love &c.," than a familiar voice, clogged a little by the dust of five days of transcontinental driving and shaking just a bit with excitement at prospects of a hot tub bath, came over the wire from Washington newspaperdom's deserter to Hollywood, who had just then parked his Rolls Royce and grabbed a phone. The reformed dramatic editor, playwright, scenarist and bon vivant is on leave from RKO-Radio and, appropriately enough, has made the Capital his first port of call on his way to a family visit in New York. One gathers from his palpitant prattle that the same old hurly-burly is hurly-burlying like nobody's business on the West Coast, that Maxine Doyle has sent messages to all and sundry in Washington, that there are other messages from both the high and the low to be delivered and that this afternoon would be a swell time to get the real lowdown over a dish of tea. That will be done. As much of it as is fit to print will be set down here later. Nice lad, this Edward de Selding Melcher, and an optimist to think he can get around to all the gang who will want to see him in two days.

Tickets now are on sale at all Loew theaters in Washington for the midnight premiere at which "The Firefly" will be introduced to the local screen at the Palace Theater next Wednesday night at 11:30 by the chronometer. There will be no advance in the regular scale of prices for this occasion.

Those who may expect to enjoy a mere camera transcription of the Rudolf Friml operetta will have both their eyes and ears opened when they discover that an entirely new book has been written for Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones, only the original title being retained. The tuneful score, with one or two catchy additions, however, still remains virtually intact. This is the one that contains this department's national anthem, "The Donkey Serenade." I wouldn't be at all surprised if this turned out to be practically the best filmusical the Capital ever has encountered.

Speaking of visitors in town, as we were somewhere a few blocks back, it was our pleasure at the preview of "Navy Blue and Gold" Tuesday to sit next Commander Harvey Haislip, U. S. N., retired, who served as technical director of the film. Commander Haislip flew into town a few days ago with the first studio print of the picture and already has screened it for high-ranking officers of the Navy Department, the commandant of the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, and the U. S. N. Movie Review Board. All were enthusiastic. Commander Haislip may be found perched on the edge of a chair in the Carlton Hotel, with his eyes glued to the telephone, awaiting a call to catch himself a plane and fly back to the coast. Nice to have had him here, anyway.

It is Ruth Benedict who drops a line on behalf of the Bureau of New Plays, 1270 Sixth avenue, New York, to say that even though manuscripts addressed only to the "Bureau of New Plays, New York," have been arriving safely at the office, Theresa Helburn, director, urges competitors in the second play competition for awards, scholarships and fellowships to use the full address, as quoted above.

There is only one month remaining during which plays may be submitted. The deadline—and how I hate that word, being up against one all the time!—is December 15.

This is the quest for new writing talent that was discussed at length in this space many weeks ago. Polish up that old script in the top till of the trunk. It may be the beginning of a great career. And then, on the other hand . . .

So the phone rings again and it is Al Trahan, headlining this week's stage bill at Loew's Capitol. (See Washington Post of Saturday, Monday—oh, just get out the file.) Mr. Trahan was tossing one of his celebrated routs at Wardman Park last night, with Lady Yukona Cameron as hostess, to the boys and girls of the press and other kindred spirits.

Between-the-Devil Note.

Diners at That Famous Hostelry

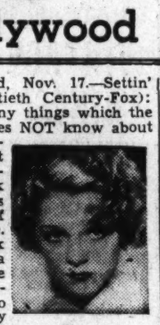
In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 17.—Settin' Around (Twentieth Century-Fox): Among the many things which the average fan does NOT know about Hollywood studios is the vast amount of research work that precedes the filming of every picture. Today, I took time out for a chat with the research director of this studio—a young lady with a fine background in library work and the mind of a super-detective After she had finished showing me the thousand and one ramifications of her department, I left in a daze.



CLAIRE TREVOR.

The research library represents an investment of more than a quarter of a million. Established connections with every big city library and museum in the United States place at the studio's disposal other millions of dollars worth of material and other thousands of skilled research workers. In every city of Europe and Asia, paid correspondents stand by to deliver wanted information. Cameramen, here, there and everywhere, working on retainer fees, supply the studio with photographs of places and things which are to be duplicated on the screen. No system of espionage has ever been more complex—or more efficient—than Hollywood's tribute to the critics in every audience.

Chatted with Claire Trevor on the "Big Town Girl" set—and heard the story of her latest embarrassing moment. Seems that a set visitor was presented to her as "Mr. Cooper." "I've just finished reading a marvelous book, 'Here's to Crime,' written by a Mr. Cooper," said Claire—and when the visitor expressed interest, she proceeded to rehash the volume, carefully explaining the highlights. Her listener urged her on and, when she had finally finished, said: "Thanks—it is seldom that an author has the opportunity to hear his work frankly reviewed. You see, I am Courtney Riley Cooper. I wrote 'Here's to Crime.'"

Even in Hollywood, there are people who argue that child stars are automatons, not actors. Today, on the "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" set, I saw their arguments refuted. Shirley Temple and that grand old veteran of the stage, Helen Westerly, were playing an emotional scene. As the cameras started to whir, Miss Westerly, the crusty grandmother of the story, gave way to her love for the child and swept Shirley into her arms. Shirley's face expressed, first wonderment, then rapture and, finally, real tears streamed down her cheeks. Miss Westerly was crying, too. And, believe it or not, the emotion got over to the hard-boiled production crew. You could have heard a pin drop on that set. "Cut," whispered the director. And those two great actresses, the child and the veteran, drew apart, stared into one another's faces for a moment—and then laughed hilariously!

12 P. M. Loretta Young and Bruce Cabot, at "21," turn when they hear two Latins mention the name Machado—former President of Cuba, who fled to Montreal—and then continue their way upstairs. "Machado," is the whisper, "slipped into New York last week. He dined at the Cafe de la Paix and at a Cuban night-spot here" . . . "Did you know this?" a producer asks at the Gay Nineties. Holiday Week Brings Comedy And Ace Films

Theaters Announce Bills for Thanksgiving Entertainment.

"To Be Continued", with Luella Gear and a large cast of farceurs, will be the Thanksgiving attraction at the National Theater, opening next Monday night. The play is described as a comedy having to do with a young woman who is not averse to taking romance where she finds it. It is whispered that she finds it in strange places. For reasons best known to themselves, the producers—Morris Green and James J. Fero—are reticent about the details of their plot. The piece was written by Charles George and directed by Melville Burke. Among those supporting the star are Thais Lawton, Claire Carleton, G. Albert Smith, Bill David, Richard Jack, Julie Brown, Dorothy Bernard and others. For the holiday week, matinees will be given on Thanksgiving Day and Saturday.

Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland are the three principal players in the Warner Brothers production of "It's Love I'm After", foremost screen feature at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Supporting members of the cast include Patric Knowles, Eric Blore, George Barbier, Bonita Granville and Spring Byington. Archie Mayo directed. The picture is described as one of the outstanding comedies of the year. The stage portion of the bill will be headlined by Harriet Hoctor, famous dancer. Others on the program are Cookie Bowers, Paul Sydell, the Merry Macs, the Spurgats and, as an extra added attraction, the Four Kraddocks, four funny sailors from the French Casino.

At Loew's Capitol Theater, for the week opening tomorrow, the chief screen feature will be "Navy Blue and Gold", the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production dealing with life, love and humor at the U. S. Naval Academy, with Robert Young, James Stewart and Tom Brown in the pivotal roles. Others in the cast include Lionel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Florence Reed, Paul Kelly, Samuel S. Hinds and Barnett Parker. This subject will take rank as one of the best of its kind ever made. On the Capitol stage next week, the entertainment will be provided by Waring's Pennsylvanians, recently seen in "Varsity Show". A long list of specialists add variety to the musical program offered by this most versatile and popular of bands.

Opening today on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, the outstanding attraction will be "Dinner at the Ritz," in which the stellar roles are played by Annabella, recently imported European star, and Paul Lukas. The story is a gay fable enlisting the services of a strong group of supporting players. Owing to the popularity of Walt Disney's new Technicolor cartoon comedy, "The Old Mill," the subject is being held over from the current program. Added short reels and a new issue of the Pathe News will complete the divertir entertainment.

"C u e s t," Metro-Goldwyn-Myer erb picturization of the great in the life of Napoleon Bona , will be continued for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning today. In this spectacular subject, Greta Garbo appears in the role of the Countess Marie Waleswka and Charles Boyer as the Little Corsican. Henry Stephenson, Alan Marshal, Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, Dame May Whitty, Leif Erikson, Reginald Owen and hundreds more appear in supporting cast.

At the Metropolitan Theater for the week commencing on Friday, the major screen offering will be "Back in Ciculation," a new Warner Brothers production in which the foremost roles are played by Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay and Joan Blondell. The story is an adaption of a magazine fiction by Adele Rogers St. John and concerns the newspaper profession, with Pat O'Brien cast as a city editor. Short sound subjects and full newsreel will complete the bill.

For the week opening today at Loew's Columbia Theater, the principal film feature will be "The Prisoner of Zenda," United Artists' picturization of the famous romantic novel by Anthony Hope. The foremost roles in this elaborate production are played by Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Raymond Massey, C. Aubrey Smith, David Niven and Mary Astor. This repeat engagement will be augmented by short reels and "Events of the Day."

Another diversified bill of short screen subjects is announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. Foremost among these will be an "Our Gang" comedy, athletic subjects and full newsreel coverage of the world.

"The Iron Duke," a romantic drama in which George Arliss recreates the figure of Wellington, will be revived at the Little Theater for a three-day engagement, beginning today. Beginning Sunday, the major feature will be a revival of "Show Boat," with Irene Dunne and Allan Jones the filmed stars.

For the second of its season's offerings on the stage of the National Theater, the Children's Theater of New York, on Saturday morning, at 10:30, will present Clair Tree Major's dramatization of the story of "Hansel and Gretel," the German equivalent of our "Babes in the Wood." This is a subject deemed particularly appropriate for the cultural development of juvenile audiences.

Opening with the usual matinee performance on Sunday afternoon, and continuing throughout the week, a new musical extravaganza will be presented at Col. Jimmy Lake's Gayety Theater. Al Golden will be the star of his all-new show, with Max Coleman in a leading comedy role and Diana Logan heading the feminine contingent. A beauty chorus will supply animated background for the skits and specialties.

Civic Theater

Both a radical experiment in playwriting and a striking development in staging were given an expert and satisfying expression in "Yellow Jack," presented last evening at the Wardman Park Theater by the Washington Civic Theater.

The drama and heroism of science, as apart from the merely personal, is depicted with a smooth flow of action in this play by Sidney Howard, whose "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle" currently adorns the National Theater. Mr. Howard's adept playwrighting is supplemented by the medical knowledge of his collaborator, Dr. Paul de Kruif, famous humanist, doctor and writer. The result is a drama that pours the aura of heroism and humanity over the authentic achievements of science, so often and unjustly viewed dispassionately and detachedly.

As an achievement in teamwork, applied brains and sharp inspiration, "Yellow Jack" is not only about the finest achievement to date of the Washington Civic Theater, but a production with true professional finish. Added to this, it has a boldness of development and an experimental novelty too often lacking in commercial stage productions.

Equal credit must go to the stage director, F. Cowles Strickland, and his fine troupers. The smoothness of performance and surprising stage effects which pleased last night's audience were results which could only have ensued upon the most painstaking rehearsal, thoughtful casting and long study of production effects.

Aside from the dramatic story of Walter Reed and his conquest of yellow fever through life-risking experiments with deadly mosquitoes, recognized as one of the great epics of science, this play also holds the attention by its unique single stage setting which contains the full compass of action extending over many years and scenes. The laboratory which occupies the upper part of the stage has an added symbolic significance, as well as being a scene of action. On the lower setting the action also ebbs and flows unimpeded by waits and with a simplicity of effects almost Shakespearean.

Though every member of the company pays effectively, there are special credits due even in this triumph of teamwork and pulling together. Frederick Rand as Dr. Finlay, the Scotch physician; Frank Gaunt, as Dr. Carroll; Paul Walter, as Dr. Lazear; Edward Stevlingson, as Dr. Agremonte, and the dignified portrayal of Walter Reed by Rudulph Watson were outstanding, as was Charles Grunwell as Soldier O'Hara.

Partner of Sen. Reed Dies.

Ancient Films Recall Thrills Of Early Days

Film Society Exhumes Hit Productions That Sent Movies on Way.

By Nelson B. Bell

RISE OF THE AMERICAN FILM. The Film Society of Washington, in cooperation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, presents "The New York Hat," "The Fugitive," "The Clever Dummy" and "A Fool There Was" as the first of 10 programs tracing the development of the American cinema. At the Rialto Theater.

"Ladies Will Kindly Remove Their Hats."

"One Minute, Please, to Change the Film."

These are the reminiscent slides flashed upon the screen of the Rialto Theater last night to turn the motion picture clock back a quarter of a century and, by contrast with the present, demonstrates with what prodigious strides the cinema has progressed from the nickelodeon to the field of potential art.

The occasion was the first subscription program of the Film Society of Washington, in co-operation with the Museum of Modern Art Library, of New York, which has accumulated a catalougue of early screen plays typifying the successive eras of film production in this country. The effect was heightened by David Manley's dated songs and Pearl Hauer's pipe organ accompaniment in the antiquated manner.

The evening's first exhibit was "The New York Hat," a simle playlet made by David Wark Griffith for Biograph, with Mary Pickford and Lionel Barrymore in the leading roles—a plump and pasty Mary Pickford and a youthful and robust Barrymore. The headgear of the title was the most impressive item of the production—an agglomeration of straw, feathers, flowers and probably fruit that represented a pitiful little waif's dream of "big city" elegance and sophistication. The story was as pitifully simple as its principal character, but sufficed to mark the genesis of modern film tchnique as it flowered back in 1912.

There followed Thomas H. Ince's Triangle production of "The Fugitive," with William S. Hart in the title role. The original title of this number, as some still living may be able to recall, was "The Taking of Luke McVane." I remember what a whiz-bang it was back when it was first released. The Western formula revealed by this subject in 1914 still is in use in a majority of its essential aspects. Enid Markey, long absent from the screen and forgotten, was the heroine. The wild riding across the desert somehow didn't seem quite so sensational as it did the year of the outbreak of the Great War, and Bill Hart only had one gun! But here, nevertheless, was the Indian "circle of death," last celebrated, I believe, ih a recent cartoon comedy, where it was made to symbolize the fact that the merry-go-round had gone flooey. Mr. Ince took the matter a little more seriously. The Redskins—not Mr. Marshall's—got their man.

Next came Mack Sennett's 1917 comedy, "The Clever Dummy," with Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Juanita Hansen, Wallace Beery and the cops to build up the inevitable chase at the end. Comedies haven't changed so much, after all, in the intervening 20 years, and you would hardly know Mr. Beery. He looked almost like Walter Pidgeon or Reginald Gardiner, done up for an afternoon pouring.

Enter The "Vamp."

The piece de resistance of the nostalgic bill was the William Fox production of "A Fool There Was," starring the smoldering Theda Bara and introducing the "vamp" vogue to the screen, also in 1914. Although a super-colossal production in its day and a stupendous money-maker, this epic of the deadlier of the sexes probably was the worst acted film ever released. Clifford Bruce, Victor Renoit, Frank Powell and Minna Gale you probably have forgotten. Miss Bara, May Allison, Mabel Frenyear and Edward Jose, foremost in the cast, are vivid memories in many movie minds that go back before sound ever was dreamed of as a valuable adjunct of picture-making.

The fabulous Miss Bara—now leading a private life of luxury and social eminence in Hollywood—is exposed as 1914's worst dresser and an emotional actress who would be a great comedienne today if she only could recapture all of the stilted artificialties of 23 years ago and twist herself into the same fantastic poses.

It all seemed very amateurish, very puerile and very tawdry. And it was. But through these early gropings for the inherent virtues of a new medium are still discernible the inspired touches of the pioneers who blazed the trail. The movies were on their way.

I wonder if 25 years from now "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Firefly," "Romeo and Juliet" and the other modern masterpieces will look so flagrantly and grotesquely immature? You answer that one.

The Evacuation Of Nanking.

The Chinese authorities have sensibly decided to prepare for the speedy evacuation of Nanking and the transfer of government departments and bureaus to Hankow and other points far removed from the present scenes of carnage.

The Japanese armies, having captured Shanghai, are now moving west toward the Chinese capital. They still have a considerable distance to go before reaching that goal. If Chiang Kai-shek manages to reorganize and reinforce his retreating armies and make as determined a stand at the second line of defense as was made at Shanghai, the fall of Nanking may not be imminent. But the Chinese leaders rightly feel that it is the counsel of wisdom to anticipate the worst so that the threatened capture of Nanking would not paralyze the government.

The impending evacuation of the capital is clearly a sign of China's military weakness in the face of Japanese superiority in equipment. But it is also evidence of a Chinese determination to fight on to the bitter end, retreating, if necessary, farther and farther into the interior. A rear-guard action of that kind, by forcing the Japanese to extend their lines of communication and spend their substance on a long and inconclusive war, might prove an unendurable strain for Japanese resources.

From the viewpoint of Chinese morale there are also advantages to balance against evacuation of the capital. To a large proportion of the population, living in centers far from Nanking, the central government has been a very remote institution. Now, as a result of the scattering of administrative departments, a large number of Chinese will for the first time have a chance to see their national government in operation and to realize that their country is now fighting for its very existence as a united nation.

Transatlantic Flying.

Until recently, discussions of transoceanic flying were the monopoly of the self-styled "scientific" magazines. But records lately established by Europeans in criss-crossing the Mediterranean and South Atlantic and by Pan-American Airways in spanning the Pacific for a year without accident or appreciable interruption of schedule have advanced intercontinental flying from the realm of fancy into that of fact. As a result, massive 150-passenger planes are now fit subjects for dry Government publications.

The Maritime Commission yesterday delivered to Congress a study of the relationship between aircraft and the development of the American merchant marine. By implication, the report argues against Federal subsidies for express liners. The commission has found that a fleet of 18 flying boats on a schedule of three flights a day could carry as many passengers across the Atlantic in a year as does one ship of the Normandie or Queen Mary type. And the planes would cost only $18,000,000 to build as against $50,000,000 for a superliner built in American yards.

So persuaded is the commission of the feasibility of a transatlantic plane service that it recommends an amendment to the merchant marine act to permit subsidization of aviation interests now prevented from carrying out their ambitious plans mainly by lack of capital. Except for possible losses in mail and express revenues, it is not believed that aircraft would injure to any important degree the financial prospects of the vessels recommended in the commission's major report. Moreover, it is reasoned that a fleet of planes would have a considerable military value in time of emergency. As for dirigibles, also possibilities for transatlantic travel, the commission attaches so heavy a defense significance to them that it prefers to leave advice on their future to the Navy.

Aside from indicating the commission's alertness, the report holds a particular interest for Washington. When regular transatlantic flying comes, icy weather will require a New World terminal situated in some reasonably temperate zone. Today Baltimore serves as a winter base for the Bermuda planes. The Nation's Capital, with the same weather, would be a far more natural and convenient station for transatlantic travelers. This recommends Gravelly Point as Washington's permanent airport. With its water approaches, it could accommodate flying boats where the alternative Camp Springs site could not.

Government And The Railways.

Lewis C. Sorrell, professor of transportation at the University of Chicago and adviser to the Transportation Conference and the Railway Business Association, has in the latter capacity completed a study dealing with the issues involved in private versus public ownership of the country's railways. Dr. Sorrell does not agree with those who believe that Government ownership is inevitable. But he asserts that "seven years of depression have left the carriers in such financial condition that the issue of private or Government ownership remains an imminent one."

Until a few years ago it was generally assumed that Government ownership of our railways was only a remote contingency. Today discussion of the subject has ceased to be an academic exercise. Instead, many are now asking whether the present system of private ownership can be preserved, even if that system is the theoretical choice of the American people. Railway managements certainly cannot avert socialistic control by their own unaided exertions, if regulatory laws and policies prevent the roads from earning a reasonable return on their property investment.

The situation is not comparable to that of the British coal-mining industry, which now faces nationalization because of inability to solve its own problems. In the case of American railways, continued existence as privately owned and operated systems requires enlightened co-operation on the part of many special interests and a forward-looking attitude on the part of regulatory officials as well.

Railway investors and executives have a heavy responsibility for eliminating obsolete capital structures and obsolete operating policies, as Dr. Sorrell states. But that is not sufficient. Shippers must also be prepared to submit to reasonable rate increases needed to supplement inadequate revenues. Labor must accommodate its demands to the financial capacity of the roads. Finally, the I. C. C. must pursue regulatory policies that offer inducements to private capital to invest in railway enterprises. Otherwise private ownership is doomed.

Distrust of the attitude of the regulatory authorities is now strikingly revealed by R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads. He has gone so far as to make an open appeal to Congress to instruct the I. C. C. to recognize the need of the roads for additional revenue through rate increases. If the roads are assured better treatment in the matter of rates, and if managements are not deprived of initiative by hampering legislation, Mr. Fletcher believes the result would be "confidence in the railroads as a medium for investment and the necessary inflow of capital from private sources."

"There is little reason to believe," says Dr. Sorrell, "that the alternative of Government ownership would improve service or effect economies not attainable under private ownership or secure better rates or achieve more progress."

As a matter of fact, under Government ownership the pressure for rate reductions, wage increases and other favors would no doubt be much greater, and for political reasons, much harder to resist. Even if labor on Government owned and operated railways were deprived of the right to strike, as Dr. Sorrell thinks likely, the unions would be more inclined to press their demands without regard for the financial ability of the roads to meet increased wage outlays.

Whether publicly or privately owned, the roads would have to be supported by some group or class in the community if they were not self-sustaining. When privately owned roads incur losses, investors suffer. If the Government-owned roads are run at a loss, taxpayers must supply the money with which to cover deficits. In short, Government ownership would solve none of the financial problems of the railways. It would merely change their character and add fresh complications due to intrusion of politics into management of the Nation's transportation system.

Contrasts In Tax Legislation.

When President Roosevelt sponsored the idea of levying punitive taxes on undistributed corporate profits he made specific recommendations as to the nature of the legislation desired. Furthermore, he pointed out that the Treasury was ready to lay plans and estimates before Congress for its guidance, and the speed with which the proposed tax measure was drafted and pushed through to passage revealed an executive guidance the more pronounced in retrospect because of the absence of Presidential leadership in this field now.

In his message to Congress at the opening of the special session the President referred to the need for tax reforms to encourage productive enterprise "especially for the smaller businesses." But he had nothing positive to suggest in the way of reforms. Indeed his assumption that large corporations have little difficulty in financing themselves under existing tax laws reveals a very inadequate appreciation of the oppressive quality of the present methods of taxing business.

The attitude of House and Senate leaders is likewise marked by an unwonted caution. Now they are extraordinarily concerned to do a thorough-going job of revising the tax laws and propose taking plenty of time to complete the task. As a matter of fact, Congress is in a much better position to legislate intelligently on tax measures today than it was when it responded to appeals for passage of the ill-advised tax on undistributed profits. Experience has shown the nature of the relief needed. Furthermore, the case for revision has been greatly strengthened by the current business recession.

With House and Senate leaders counseling delay, however, and with various members of Congress advertising their pet proposals for tax reform, it is essential that the Administration, through the Treasury, should promptly offer a positive plan for consideration.

Ordinarily piecemeal tax legislation is unwise, but at this time circumstances justify immediate action. The need for drastic reform of the undistributed profits tax and the tax on capital gains as well has been amply demonstrated. Hence it is not necessary to defer action, in a clear emergency, until a well-rounded tax program has been slowly evolved.

Inexcusable Delay.

Although four and one-half years have passed since the Tennessee Valley Authority was created, the Supreme Court has not yet passed upon the validity of the act or the methods employed in the distribution and sale of power. As a result of this unconscionable delay, both the private power companies in the region and TVA officials have been seriously hampered in the conduct of their business.

The privately owned companies cannot, of course, make plans for future expansion until they know what limits, if any, are to be placed upon Government encroachment on their domain. Neither can they hope to attract new capital into the industry so long as the Government's power policy remains in a nebulous form and Federal experiments like the TVA are open to challenge on constitutional grounds.

On the other hand, the TVA has had its plans for expansion held up by numerous injunction suits and litigation in the lower courts. All these legal conflicts have added to the tension existing between the public authorities and the utilities and interfered with the conclusion of satisfactory working arrangements. Obviously it is to the advantage of every one concerned to hasten a final settlement of these issues.

A case just brought before a special court of three judges sitting in Chattanooga raises squarely certain questions to which answers are urgently needed. The companies bringing the suit not only challenge the validity of the TVA act itself but also the right of the Government to produce and sell electricity in competition with private concerns. By next spring, when this case is expected to reach the Supreme Court on appeal, we should know with some definiteness just how far the Government may go in carrying out its power policies.

Answers to the questions raised in this suit will serve not only for the guidance of officials responsible for developments in the Tennessee Valley, but also as a check upon future legislative experiments. The Norris bill for dividing the entire country into power areas with new administrative agencies for each region is already being seriously considered. It would be the height of legislative folly for Congress to pass a measure providing for seven more TVAs without first testing the legality of the initial experiment.

Had the Administration wished, the status of the Tennessee Valley Authority could have been determined long ago. Instead it was not until last spring, when an impasse between the Government and the private utility interests had been brought about, that counsel for the TVA urged an early ruling by the Supreme Court. That is equivalent to confession that the policy of evasion and delay has been detrimental to the Administration's own program as well as to private interests.

Down On The Farm.

The farmer is forever expecting the unexpected. If the Weather Man doesn't furnish a surprise the market will. And if the former doesn't act up and the latter down, that is the biggest surprise of all.

So when a Utah farmer, while digging a ditch, recently uncovered the remains of an elephant 12 feet tall at the shoulders, it is a cinch he never turned a hair. Not his own, anyhow. But the bones of the mammoth were covered with hair 15 inches long and underneath this it had a coat of wool, thus demonstrating lack of any relationship to the G. O. P., or thin-skinned pachyderm.

"Huh-uh," said the farmer. "I know just how it was. Away back in the post-tertiary age (or was it the pleistocene?) the Government undertook to peg up the price of wool, hair and elephant steaks and the result was that this poor little mastodon got plowed under."

After which he dropped a tear on his mattock and a postal card to the State University and resumed his ditch digging, still grieving over the fact that nothing ever happens down on the farm.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says she has heard no third-term talk at home. That's all very well, but when has Mrs. Roosevelt been home?

The press recently carried a story of a man who climbed a tree to escape an angry bull and rammed his head into a hornets' nest. Life's like that.

With meat prices what meat prices are, it would indeed be a prodigal father who prepared the fatted calf for a returning son these days.

Most of us are serfs at heart. We like to do a favor for the kind of person who thinks he's doing us a favor by asking us to do him a favor.

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Supports 'Aristo.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Only on rare occasions do I write letters to a newspaper. I now wish again to avail myself of that privilege in order to compliment one whose letter in The Post of November 11 is signed "Aristo." I admire this man for his philosophy and his frank assertions.

He is entirely right about the "futile uplift movement" as fathered by this Administration. Take a man out of his natural environment—the surroundings in which he was born and raised—and, unless he has experienced constant intellectual growth, he will sooner or later gravitate toward his former mode of living. He will ultimately arrive at exactly where he belongs, by "right of his birth."

Air and water, we all know, cannot be mixed. Neither can we mix culture, refinement and education with the limited accomplishments of the rabble. The intellects of each is diametrically opposed and therefore create confusion, and breed ill-will and misunderstanding. There are, to be sure, those born in the lower levels of society who are distinctively appreciative of the finer things of life. Those minds and their backgrounds, however, are far superior to those of the "hod-carrier" class referred to by "Aristo."

Votes! Yes, and more votes, is the true incentive, the true driving force behind the President's "great uplift movement." Who, with the intelligence of a child and the ambition of a dead man wouldn't vote for a system which assures ease, comparative comfort and good pay thrown in, at the expense of the more learned voter and taxpayer? Contemplate the results of riff-raff mass psychology, from a political standpoint, in Pennsylvania, specifically in the steel areas around Pittsburgh. When the ignorant gain control, good government disappears. E. L. S.

Takoma Park, Md., Nov. 11.

Communist Cells.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I add my word of congratulation on the articles exposing the "Red Annapolis" in lower New York State and the splendid work of your reporter. Probably few people realize the hazards faced by a reporter covering such a story and aside from the excellence of the story itself the reporter deserves full measure of credit for his courage.

There is a very unfortunate angle, however, as a result, from featuring such a single story in that the average reader, without knowledge of the true facts, may consider this simply an isolated case. The Communists have established their "cells" in practically every important American industry and plant and especially in important American organizations and, of course, including our Army and Navy.

If any thinking American still doubts the very real threat of communism in the United States let him study very carefully the official report of the Peace Officers Association of California, just recently published. A. A. HALL, President, National Americanism Foundation.

District Doctors' Stand.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every year the hospitals of Washington, through the Community Chest, make an appeal for funds to the people of Washington. This appeal is based on the theory that the people of this community have an interest in the hospitals of the District. Recently, however, certain physicians of Washington, through the District Medical Society, threatened to invoke "economic sanctions" against any hospital which admits members of Group Health Insurance, Inc., proceeding, no doubt, on the theory the hospitals of Washington are the private hunting grounds of these physicians.

Thus we have a conflict of theories, one contending that the hospitals of a community are vested with a public interest, the other contending that they are the private hunting grounds of a group of physicians. If the physicians are right, then the hospitals have no right to public support, and should be removed from the Community Chest. If the Community Chest is right, that the hospitals are of public concern, then the physicians of the District Medical Society should be soundly spanked for their anti-social statement, and reminded that they are permitted to practice by the public, and owe their primary duty to the public.

Meanwhile, contributors to the Community Chest will have justified doubts as to the wisdom of earmarking their contributions for hospitals, unless the District Medical Society repudiates its statement in regard to the hospitals. P. T.

Washington, Nov. 15.

Prefabricated Houses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Foremost of the lagging industries, and far behind others that have been making great strides in recent months, is the housing industry.

It would seem that, given our present-day technological development, much more of actual building operations than is now the case could be performed in plants instead of at the site. There are many idle or only partly running factories that would be able to manufacture prefabricated sections and architectural products. Perhaps additional capital might be needed for this express purpose, and here the RFC could easily help.

Taken together with the vast slum clearance projects soon to get under way, both publicly and privately sponsored housing programs should move hand in hand so that the construction industry's dollar will be spread to greater advantage throughout the Nation. This should also materially decrease unemployment. GUY d'AULBY.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Nov. 12.

Civil Liberties Inquiry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a speech before the Ohio Society of New York the other evening Gov. Davey, of Ohio, in discussing calling out of the troops in connection with the steel strike, said, among other things: "Without the presence of the troops there would have occurred on that Tuesday morning the most terrible butchery in the industrial history of America, not by the law-abiding citizens, not willingly by the officers of the law in the performance of their duties, but by the invading thousands of armed pickets" and that "the C. I. O. was bent on enforcing its will at any price in bloodshed, terriorism and death."

In The Post of November 11 there appears an item stating that the Senate civil liberties committee has been investigating various vigilante groups and had issued subpenas for certain of these organizations, presumably for their appearance before the committee here in Washington.

Now, what I should like to have someone, a member of the committee, labor partisan or just plain citizen like myself, tell me is how anyone can have any faith in the actions of the committee when it ignores charges like this by the Governor of a great State, yet at the same time puts the heat—so to speak—on employers or citizens' organizations opposed to the strike?

Was the money for the expenses of the committee appropriated with the understanding that only one side would be investigated, or was it appropriated for the purpose of a full, free and fair inquiry into all phases of the current strike between the opposing forces or classes?

If the inquiry is to be of any value it would seem that the committee must very definitely change its tactics. CHARLES C. WHEAT.

Maxwell Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in answer to a letter appearing in The Post of November 15 by a woman asking other women to join her in petitioning the Governor of Virginia to free Edith Maxwell.

The miscarriage of justice in the case of Edith Maxwell is a challenge to every American woman to immediately demand a change in the laws that permit such injustice. Our country is an unsafe place for women if self-defense is not possible. Edith Maxwell not only should be freed but should also be paid a sum of money to help her to go to some place to forget the dreadful wrong done her by incarceration and anguish these two years since the death of her father.

I shall be glad to join a group of women to petition the Governor of Virginia to free the poor girl, Edith Maxwell. It is the least any woman can do.

Why not ask the men to join us? Has American manhood ceased to defend its women?

AN AMERICAN WOMAN.

Least Organized Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the recent letter from "One of the 130-Million." I am sure there will always be poor starved little "Williams" dying by their own hand or otherwise, in this "land of plenty" (of ignorance) until mothers are given the knowledge that they need to control the size of their families.

Whoever heard of anyone urging a farmer to have more cows and pigs than he could feed, or a business to carry on with no financial backing, and this business of bringing children into the world is our largest and least organized.

THE LOWLY POET.

Call For Boycott.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let the whole world boycott all Japanese goods. Let her merchant ships be turned back from all ports of all civilized countries, and send them home. Let Japan have the hell at home which she has been forcing upon the weak and helpless! Let her army of savages be annihilated if our civilization is to endure. H. BRADFORD.

Bethesda, Md., Nov. 12.

A Representative Civil Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The suggestion of a Negro on the Civil Service Commission will strike the timid mind with astonishment, unaccustomed as it is to seeing colored men in high official station. But, on analysis, the appropriateness of such an assignment becomes apparent. The discrimination and distinction against colored applicants under the Civil Service set-up is acknowledged and notorious. The colored applicant is often cheated out of his appointment, fairly won as a result of a competitive test. Discrimination on account of race and color is a flagrant violation of the Civil Service Law, and has become a major national scandal.

The effect of a colored member on the commission would, of itself, guarantee the absence of racial discrimination in its deliberations and policy. There are any number of highly educated colored men well qualified for the place. New York City for years has had a colored Harvard graduate as a member of the Civil Service Board. Before his day, Prof. Richard T. Greener, first Negro graduate of Harvard, served as secretary of the commission. The City of Chicago has had a Negro on its civil service board. The example of these two largest American municipalities might well be imitated by the Federal Government.

The presence of a Negro member of the commission would inspire the would-be Negro applicant with confidence and courage. The repeated humiliation and chagrin of having the door of hope slammed in his face after he has won the reward according to the rule has so intimidated the colored applicant that he no longer has the hardihood to take the examination.

In the by-gone days when Grover Cleveland was President, and Theodore Roosevelt Civil Service Commissioner, the clerical ranks of the Government were recruited from thousands of colored applicants. Since that day, although the race has made marked intellectual progress, there has been little or no colored recruitment.

Lost Chapter.

A REMNANT of the shattered hopes of the "little corporal" of France dissolved into smoke and smoldering ruins last Saturday when Beverly Manor, near Salisbury, Md., burned to the ground. It was there that the first page of an unfinished chapter in world history was written in international plot and intrigue—America's lost chapter in the life of Napoleon.

Conspiracies concerned with the rescue seethed about the island of St. Helena, but none of them came so near completion as the plot conceived and promoted in the United States. Plans made at Beverly Manor, a ship built from funds raised in Charleston and a house built as his residence in New Orleans, were all a part of the elaborate scheme. The house stands today, mute testimony of the slender thread upon which hung Napoleon's hope and perhaps the fate of this country.

* * *

With his health failing rapidly, Napoleon once spoke of his bitter disappointment. "In America, I should have established the center of a new French fatherland. Within a year, I should have had 60,000 men grouped about me . . ." Thus recorded in the words of the famous Corsican, we catch just a glimpse of the story that the lost chapter of American history might have contained.

It is generally conceded that the plot would have been successful. It was known to Napoleon's staff and authorized by them and was acknowledged by Dr. Antomarchi and Marshal Bertrand on their visit to New Orleans after the death of their chief.

Foremost among those engaged in carrying out the rescue plans were Nicholas Girod, mayor of the city of New Orleans, and many of the old French residents who chose Capt. Bossiere to build and command "the fastest vessel in the world," which could defy pursuit by the whole British navy.

* * *

A more suitable person could not have been found than the violent and glamorous Bossiere, whose reckless, adventurous life had fitted him for any daring undertaking. He was a Frenchman by descent. His father had been at Yorktown with Count Rochambeau and his mother was also French, from the Island of San Domingo.

Bossiere's restless, impetuous nature had led him to command a small boat for his own pleasure and that of his friends from the city who enjoyed the excitement of donning the seagoing red flannel shirts and duck trousers of amateur sailors. They sailed out into the gulf to play piratical jokes on the incoming ships, which often led to trouble and required much explanation.

But with real adventure laid at his feet, Bossiere entered wholeheartedly into the enterprise and proceeded to build and equip the speedy "Seraphine," at the same time devising plans for the rescue of Napoleon.

He was easily the master of his hand-picked crew of gay desperadoes, among whom was Dominick You, a member of Lafitte's pirate crew. For weeks they drilled thoroughly. Agents of the imprisoned emperor had provided Bossiere with maps of the harbor and plans of the fortifications. A detailed study was made of the ships guarding the island and the military regulations of the guards.

* * *

The plan was to go to St. Helena, where they would scale the precipitous heights of the rock-bound island, rush the guard and break into the stronghold. In the meantime, eluding the guardships, the "Seraphine" would have crept into position below the window from which Napoleon would be lowered to the deck. Once on board, the speed of the little clipper ship could be depended upon to outstrip any boat in the British navy which might start in pursuit.

After many rehearsals, the date was set for the departure of what was, undoubtedly, the most colorful rescue squad ever organized. There were enthusiastic demonstrations and much fanfare, but three days before they were to sail word came of Napoleon's death.

What the history of America might have been had not fate intervened we can only conjecture. In his "meditations" we find many regrets that he had entrusted himself to England instead of "among the noble republican people of the United States of America," sometimes even picturing himself as founding new states here.

* * *

Beverly Manor is gone, but down in the Vieux Carre of New Orleans stands the three-story mansion of many windows, built for the use of the "little corporal," now only a monument to his dream.

Drastic Remedy.

Rather than take his employer's dog for a daily ride as part of his job, Henri Oudot, a chauffeur in Washington, D. C., has shot himself.

This seems rather a drastic way of objecting to a job even though his wound is reported not serious. Plenty of people take their dogs riding because they want to. Maybe Henri does not like dogs or feels it humiliating to taxi a mutt that does not belong to him. Even so, why not look around for a chore more to his liking instead of shooting himself?

Trouble often looms very large when it is close by. From a perspective it does not amount to much. A year in another job and Henri would not have been able to remember the dog's name.

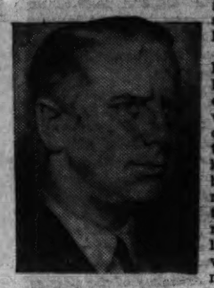
Dry Memories.

YOU MAY THINK I am trying to be homespun, but I can remember where and when a child whose father or mother got drunk or even kept a case of beer in the cellar or a jug of rye in the cupboard was disgraced and sort of kept apart from the rest of the kids in the school yard.



The circumstances may have been rather special, because the three Protestant churches in town were running a local option campaign against the three saloons. One was kept by a quiet, respectable German named Ehrmantraut, who catered to the family trade, serving mostly nickel beers and liverwurst-on-rye. Another was attached to a drummers' hotel and was cited by the local preachers and the guest orators brought in by the W. C. T. U. as the living counterpart of the Sickle and Sheaf in "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

The third, run by a man named Hawkins, was the place where the sporting blood congregated at night. Mr. Hawkins' free lunch was supposed to be the best in town, and there was a superstition that his Negro chef, who wore one of those muffin-shaped white hats, would pay a kid two bits for soup turtles out of Mud Lake or Galpin's Lake.

AS THE DRY CAMPAIGN warmed up there came a great scandal in our town. It seemed that a couple of boys maybe 18 or 19 years old and beyond school age, because there was no high school, got into an argument, and one of the sports bought a barrel of beer and set it up in a quiet place of a Sunday afternoon, rallied the high-rollers, and turned the boys loose in a ring.

There was a Sunday closing law even under license, and, although the beer was sold on a Sunday, this incident was an outrageous profanation of the Sabbath, and there was all hell to pay when the news broke. It was just so much worse because it was claimed that the two young gladiators were plied with beer after the fight—their first false step, as the ministers said, and opportune proof that the perfidious brewers lost no opportunity to enslave and debauch the youth of our fair community.

The news spread around town that this one and that one—fathers, uncles and big brothers of some of the kids in school—had been suppeeniated to the county seat, and, though none of us quite knew what suppeeniation meant, we knew it was real bad.

The drys had all the luck that year. Their campaign stuff was very exciting and played to big crowds, because the only regular amusement—if you could call it regular—was supplied by fly-by-night troupes of singers and card trick magicians who would open the Town Hall maybe once a month and do their stuff for 25 cents a head, children 15 cents.

• • • •

THE DRYS, however, gave us singers and magic lantern shows two or three nights a week for about a month. The songs were such as "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" with slides showing a white-haired mother alone gazing at a baby shoe and a dissipated youth slumped over a table in a big-city hell-hole.

They were a cinch to win the election, and, not that they needed any more material, just a couple of days before the vote some poor bum from down around the water tank, where the harvest hands waited for the freights, got locked up in the town jug for being drunk, set fire to the mattress, and strangled on the smoke. There was no attendant at the lockup, no faucet, or anything, and it was a terrible place to wake up hung over. But this poor man couldn't even get out of his cell to open a window, and by the time someone noticed smoke around the eaves he was all done.

The Rev. Mr. McKenzie, the Methodist minister, lived close by, and he movingly described the dying movements of this repentant sinner, some mother's son, who feebly turned his eyes to him and gasped, "Oh, Reverend, pray for me!" As Mr. McKenzie finished the dreadful story he dropped to his knees and all present followed him in prayer to Almighty God to be not severe with this weak, penitent wanderer, to comfort his poor mother wherever she might be, and to deliver a substantial majority against license and our three saloons on election day.

The drys won about 6 to 1.

The Once Over

The "Mouthpiece And The Crook."

It begins to look as if certain criminal lawyers may have to turn honest, or nearly so.

• • • •

The era during which any smart racketeer could outwit the law and escape punishment through his "mouthpiece" would seem to be approaching a dead end street.

• • • •

In a disbarment decision handed down by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York recently it was plainly declared that a lawyer who habitually assists criminals in their operations becomes in effect a member of the criminal gang. Fancy that, now!

• • • •

"The license to practice law does not license an attorney to engage in criminal activities with clients, nor does it permit him to aid and abet the commission of crime," said the court.

• • • •

These lawyers had always known in a sort of vague way that they weren't doing right by society when they connived in the business of keeping America's public enemies on the loose, but it had all become so orthodox and customary!

• • • •

The big-shot criminal lawyer, swaggering around our courtrooms, bullying the State's witnesses, doublecrossing the court, and making a joke of justice (with occasional recesses for photographic close-ups) has become a spectacle familiar to all Americans.

• • • •

The more people read of these criminal trials the more they marveled that our law schools could turn out such unscrupulous buzzards.

• • • •

These "mouthpieces" of the public enemies knew there was something in the book about a "duty to society" and about all lawyers being primarily "officers of the court," but they merely giggled when you brought up these points.

• • • •

The New York court's remarks caused a sensation and frightened one element of the profession so generally that, according to reliable reports, a lawyer yesterday insisted on going over the true facts of a case before naming his fee! The client fainted.

• • • •

Scattered fainting from all parts of the country is expected. And the indications are that it will increase rather than abate. It's going to be hard for clients to realize that some lawyers want to be honest men.

Latin America Today

By Peter Thicket.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

Buenos Aires.

THERE is a vast difference between imperialism and enlightened leadership. Especially on the American continent, but in all the world, there is a large number of nations that would welcome the latter in these days when they are subjected to antagonistic pulls which threaten to tear them apart. As long as the forces of fascism and communism operate at the same time the result is neutral. The courted nation remains neatly balanced on the fence and can preserve its own political, social and economic forms. But when one of these forces recedes, the other, in this strange international tug-of-war, pulls successfully and brings the desired nation closer into its own camp. This is inevitable because the vast majority of the nations which receive the proselyting attentions of the warring ideologies of our day are, militarily and financially, relatively weak though rich in natural resources and in available unpopulated lands.

Since 1914 the Latin American nations, by and large, have gone through three phases. In the first, a Wilsonian democracy and idealism swept over the Continent and there occurred a slight and perceptible shift to more truly democratic forms and practices. The alleged aims of the war and the closer contacts with the United States, Great Britain and France served to bring this about. War-time prosperity played its role, too. A middle class began to appear and it served as a brake on the power of the old landed-industrial aristocrats.

Then came the depression of 1921, the disillusionment as to the real causes of the World War and the rise of communism in Russia. Up to 1930, communist propaganda was rife in Latin America and there were many who came to believe that it offered an ideal political and economic system for nations with large Amerindian populations who, by false analogies, were compared to the pre-revolution peasants in Russia. But communism owed much of its success in Latin America to the very democracy it would overthrow. Uruguay is a case in point. This nation allowed the representatives of the Soviet full liberty on the grounds that in a democracy all were equal and had equal rights.

Depression Interpreted As Decline Of Democracy.

WITHIN 1930 the whole scene shifts. The world depression was interpreted as a collapse of democracy in most of Latin America, and this weakened, stunted or pulled up by the roots such burgeoning democratic shoots as existed. Strong governments rose on the ashes of the revolutions of 1930 and on the ruins of economic structures.

With democracy apparently in the discard and, save in Mexico, with strong aristocratic or wealthy socialistic governments in control, communism lost ground. Fascist forces then rushed in offering a pew social and economic system, "the product of Latin genius," a regime comparable to those set up as a response to depression conditions and backed by precisely the same Latin American classes as supported it abroad. The civil war in Spain favored these forces, at first, and just a year ago it seemed that fascism was going to carry the day in almost every Latin American country save two or three. And in most instances it was to be a European and not an indigenous form of the regime. The cards from abroad had been beautifully played.

At this point Washington woke up. The announcement of the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, a seed planted early in 1936, brought new elements into the picture. It speeded up and caused the transatlantic forces to redouble their efforts, but it also brought the word democracy back into Latin American vocabularies and added a third pull to the two which already existed.

President Roosevelt's visit, the peace parley and the whole atmosphere and technique of the conference permitted long dormant democratic shoots to spring up again.

Washington Demonstrated Understanding At Parley.

AT THE CONFERENCE Washington revealed clearly that it understood the problem and knew what should be done. Its own projects of conventions on crucial matters were accepted. When the conference ended, vital Latin American forces, once hostile, had proclaimed from the housetops that the leadership of Washington was welcome and that, by and large, the Latin American nations would follow her in the wedge which she, Great Britain and France had opened in the fascist-communist walls.

Then Washington and the United States failed. The motives and the intentions are still perhaps as good as they were; but instead of widening the breach that was opened in December, 1936, at the peace conference, Washington marched straight through and has allowed Fascist-Communist forces to close it again. She did not or could not follow through.

The nation as a whole, and its businessmen, and the exporters in particular, have still the old-fashioned and native belief—and this is ironical in a nation where advertising has become a science and an art—that the sheer superiority of our culture and our goods would sell themselves in any markets of the world against all comers and all competition. In this respect recent administrations have been way ahead of the American public and to the extent that such things depend on popular support Washington's failure can be condoned. And there are some things which Washington itself cannot do. Private organizations must organize, finance and carry on many activities for which the government sets the stage.

But the very founders of the American Republic deftly left to the Chief Executive the major responsibility for formulating and carrying out the foreign policy of the United States, and for once, from a Latin American point of view, there are no personal handicaps in the State Department. There is genuine, sincere love and admiration for Mr. Cordell Hull in all Latin America. Mr. Sumner Welles is highly respected and esteemed. And Mr. Laurence Duggan is considered "simpatico" by all those who know him. These three are personally responsible for a mopping-up program which made the peace conference possible. Latin America, so minded, might have flung a monkey wrench into the machinery. But it was not so minded, and that is a big tribute. But Washington has not carried through.

American Stake Declared Important In Latin America.

THE MATTER is too serious for it to be treated with gloves on. The stakes at issue are too great. It is a matter of no concern whatsoever to the United States what form of government, what economic or social system, or what foreign policy a Latin American nation itself adopts. But it is the concern of every American that his legitimate interests at home and abroad be not undermined by forces inimical to him.

The legitimate interests of the United States are enormous and go far beyond the export of products and the collection of debts in default. Without being unrealistic one can conceive of the United States as the center of a new, vital and dynamic culture which expands and radiates to all parts of the world. Due to its Americanism it has a special affinity with the corresponding vital and dynamic culture of Latin America—with this difference: Latin America is still receiving just as the United States received from Europe in the formative days of her history.

Unnatural, artificial and immoral barriers to that normal, healthy and disinterested expansion hurt, damage and warp that culture at its heart. With all the mental, moral and material energy at their command, enemies of democracy, of the United States and of purely American—in the wider sense of the word—forces, are seeking to plant themselves in the New World and between the United States and Latin America.

In certain Latin American regions, openings for North American cultural influences and leadership are as wide as barn doors; but Washington and American business have failed to grasp their opportunities and the Europeans have rushed in. It would have been better not to have suggested a program of cultural rapprochement than to back it up and then fail to carry it out. The Europeans are taking advantage of Washington's failure. In spite of its splendid accomplishments, the Buenos Aires Peace Conference may become known as the parley that merely stopped the Latin American clock for a year.

Revealing Note

By Barnet Nover.

Two Worlds In Conflict.

FROM TOKYO comes the report that the Japanese government is now seriously weighing the advisability of withdrawing its signature from the Nine-Power Treaty.

Since the Japanese are not particularly noted for a sense of humor, this report is to be taken at its face value. Apparently the Japanese are convinced that their government has abided faithfully by the terms of that treaty; that it has done nothing since 1922 to infringe upon China's territorial and administrative integrity or the pledge to keep open the Open Door.

Only now has Japan decided to assume a free hand in the Far East by releasing itself from the fetters of the Nine-Power Treaty. And in all seriousness a group of members of the Japanese House of Representatives have issued a statement declaring that:

"The Nine-Power pact was concluded in 1922. Since then the world markedly has changed, especially in the Orient . . . The Japanese government should immediately denounce the Nine-Power Treaty, thus preventing intervention in any Chinese-Japanese dispute under pretext of that treaty."

• • • •

TO THE OVERWHELMING majority of Americans all this will appear unmitigated hypocrisy of a peculiarly nauseating variety. Few Americans will accept the contention that Japan has in the slightest measure been restrained by the solemn commitments she made when she signed the Nine-Power Treaty. Events in the Far East since the Japanese militarists ran amuck in Manchuria in 1931 have revealed an utterly cynical attitude by Japan toward her pledged word. If any nation deserves condemnation as one whose word can under no circumstances be trusted that nation is Japan.

And yet no proper understanding of the present mess in the Far East and Japan's relations thereto is possible unless we realize that the Japanese are not consciously being cynical and do not regard their position as hypocritical at all.

• • • •

FOR INSTANCE, the Japanese believe wholeheartedly in the sanctity of treaties—as interpreted by themselves—and particularly of those treaties which China signed under duress from Japan. They believe fervently in co-operation with China for the "good of the Far East." But that co-operation, as they see it, can be achieved only if China does Japan's bidding and comes to regard the island empire as a great and good friend. And the Japanese also believe in peace. They believe in it earnestly and deeply—even if they have to bombard Chinese cities and destroy an untold number of innocent Chinese men, women and children to bring that peace about.

From our point of view the Japanese standpoint is eyewash. It is not eyewash to the Japanese. But this only makes a bad situation worse.

• • • •

IT GETS down to this: The Japanese live in a world of their own in which words that mean one thing to us are given an utterly different meaning by them. That is why Japanese propaganda in this country, even when issued by those who have lived here for some time and presumably have some understanding of American psychology, is so largely nonsensical. For even while trying to talk the language we understand the words used by the propagandists for Japan are given a peculiarly Japanese twist.

It is not surprising, then, that resolutions of condemnation and notes of protest have had so little effect on the Japanese course in the Far East. For the only effective medium of expression that exists between the island empire and the outside world is that of force—military, naval, financial and economic.

• • • •

JAPAN, from the beginning of its history as a modern nation, has been an explosive element in the world. The reasons are far more intimately related to Japan's social system—particularly the circumstance that the military-feudal element has always been dominant—than in Japan's economic difficulties.

If Japan has made great progress economically during the past 75 years this has been only incidentally and to a negligible degree because of the expansion of the Japanese empire. Nor is imperial expansion likely to solve Japan's present economic difficulties. Indeed, if history is any guide, such expansion is likely to increase them.

From time to time, however, Japan has been stopped in its tracks. At the time of the Washington conference this was the result of a combination of the rising power of the United States, which opposed Japan's annexation of Shantung, and of a very considerable anti-Japanese boycott movement in China. In 1895, it was a combination of Germany, Russia and France which prevented Japan from then obtaining a foothold in Manchuria. And there have been other instances of the same order.

If Japan is to be restrained today, and if it is not restrained the fabric of peace not only in the Far East but everywhere is certain to be weakened considerably, it will have to be by more than pleas for treaty observance and resolutions declaring Japan "out of step with the world." Japan's sinews of war will have to be cut. If this were done—and it could easily be done if the will were there—by the United States, Great Britain and her dominions and France in combination, Japan's fighting capacity would wither away. There are few certainties in the world but this is one of them. But whether those nations are prepared to take the necessary economic measures which the situation calls for is anything but certain.

Ancestor of Mencken

By William Lyon Phelps

Fakers In History.

A new book, published by Alfred A. Knopf, New York, and limited to 1,475 copies, has just appeared, called "The Charlatanry of the Learned." It was written more than 200 years ago and consists of two lectures delivered by Dr. Johann Burkhard Mencken. It is adorned with a brilliant and scholarly introduction by H. L. Mencken.

Barnum made a fortune on the proposition that the American people loved to be gulled. But why drag in Americans? The history of humanity is the history of delusions; fakers of various kinds have had a rich harvest every year since 400 B. C.

• • • •

There are many varieties of quacks; the political quack, the medical quack, the religious quack, the soothsayers, clairvoyants, and an infinite number of prophets who are really profiteers. They make a living off the ignorant and the credulous.

But this remarkable book, now for the first time conveniently accessible in English, while it shows the vast amount of ignorant and credulous people then existing, is particularly devoted to the fakers themselves; all of them claiming to be scholars and devoted to special research.

Dr. Mencken felt it to be his duty to warn his pupils and the world in general against these wolves in sheep's clothing; many of them had considerable learning but they knew an enormous number of things that were not so.

The pathetic part of this book, and I read every word of it with keen interest, is the tremendous egotism displayed by the professors who are attacked. Surely learning should make men humble and modest; surely teachers of youth in our colleges should care far more about the recovery of truth than for their own part in it. Surely—but why go on?

Tom McCarthy

Lord Beaverbrook . . . Under the Table.

"HE PUTS ME under the table . . . and he has me peeking through keyholes!"

One of the most unusual men in contemporary British history sat in a modest room at the Mayflower Hotel and verged on the petulant. He didn't say it in so many words, but he implied that it was hell to hire genius.

TOM McCARTHY.

He was a little man with a big head and a broad mouth. He was born Max Aitken in Ontario Canada. He was the son of a poor Scotch Presbyterian minister. He washed bottles for a chemist at a dollar a week, and he sold papers on the street while going to grade school—the only school he ever attended.

But at 25 he had a background of law which he had read on his own. And he had wrested a fortune from the financial world of Montreal. And when he sat in his room at the Mayflower he was the Lord Beaverbrook, who had become five times a millionaire at the age of 31, and peer of the British realm at 39.

He wasn't the sort of a man whom you would expect to grow petulant about employes. Particularly if you'd heard him talking to the pilot of the amphibian plane which flew him to Washington.

"Do you want to see Mattern?" the pilot asked. By Mattern he meant the famed Jimmie Mattern, who gained attention some years back with an attempted flight around the world.

"No need to see Mattern," said Lord Beaverbrook. "just as long as we see his plane." Beaverbrook, the man who, with Bonar Law, brought about the collapse of the Asquith government in 1916 and sent in Lloyd George as prime minister, has no illusions about personalities.

"LOW . . . undoubtedly a genius . . . but he's always lampooning me. The more I pay him . . . the more radical he becomes. He pictures me under tables . . . peeking through the keyholes. And I pay his salary . . . and he uses my own paper."

Lord Beaverbrook shook his large head and drove his left hand deeper into the pocket of his trousers. He wore a suit patterned with large checks, and his rumpled soft collar turned up at the wings.

But while Lord Beaverbrook was disturbed and mildly hesitant when it came to his world famous cartoonist, Low, he had no difficulty in giving forthright answers to the other questions.

"Why am I in the United States? I'm just passing through . . . on my way to Jamaica. Want to get away from London fogs. I have asthma.

"War in Europe? I knew you'd ask that one. No, I don't think there will be a European war for quite a bit. Not for quite a bit. The man in the street . . . he's sick of war. There's no fight left in the English. Certainly, they remember 1914!"

The usual question about the Duke and Duchess of Windsor excited better than the usual reply. Lord Beaverbrook's heavy face creased in a smile and his hand emerged from his trousers pocket long enough to descend resoundingly against his thigh.

The effect on his traveling companions was even more definite. Mr. Brachen, fresh faced young member of the House of Commons, threw back his head as he screamed with laughter, and the young blond Lord Forbes simply collapsed on the bed.

When the excitement had died down Lord Beaverbrook announced that the three of them had made a bet as to how long it would be before that question was asked.

"Yes, in England," he said, "we look upon Mr. Roosevelt as a benign gentleman. We are familiar with your Senators and Representatives. But of course the big American news to British readers is the activity of your stock market."

THEN HE WAS suddenly galvanized into action. Actually, the conversation had degenerated. "World affairs" were left behind and the topic up for discussion hinged on the relative merits of British and American plumbing.

Lord Beaverbrook rose, crossed the room and, accompanied on his tour of inspection by a member of the House of Commons, he threw open the door of the bathroom. Turning on the light, he surveyed the room from the doorway. Then he turned back to reporters with the comment, "Very first rate. First rate, indeed."

Mount Vernon Address of the President

By the Associated Press.

Mount Vernon, Nov. 17.—The address prepared by President Roosevelt for delivery at the meeting of the presidents of the land grant colleges and universities and delivered by Secretary Wallace in the absence of the President, follows:

Today, here at Mount Vernon, we are paying tribute to George Washington—not as the general who won the war for independence, not as the statesman who welded the former colonies into one strong nation, but as the outstanding farmer and farm leader of his time.

When the call of duty came Washington was glad to give himself for years on end to the service of his country; yet his heart turned always homeward toward his beloved plantation. While he was leading the American Army in the Revolutionary War, he could seldom visit his home. But during the years he was President he returned to it as often as he could from the capital at New York. Over a span of 40 years, from 1759 until his death in 1799, the farm at Mount Vernon was the center of his interest.

Business and Hobby.

For him farming was both a business and a hobby. To farming as a business he brought the talents of a great executive. To farming as a hobby he brought the adventurous mind of a pioneer.

His 8,000-acre estate at Mount Vernon was divided into five separate units. His methods of management and his careful keeping of accounts are an inspiration to farmers of the present. He knew how to merchandise his products so as to get a premium price—for example, the wheat he shipped under his special brand to the West Indies was rated as the best to be had.

But more striking was the pioneering he did in the arts of husbandry. He was not satisfied to do things as they always had been done. When he found that one-crop tobacco farming was wearing out his land, he cut down his output of tobacco from 33,000 to 5,000 pounds and replaced it with wheat, English clover and a variety of other crops. He took measures to stop gullying and erosion. He continually tried to improve his strains of live stock and from his sheep got more than twice as much wool per fleece as his neighbors got from theirs. He made a tour through the Carolinas to exhibit one of his mules so as to popularize the use of mules. He tried out a thrashing machine invented in Scotland.

Sold Products Afar.

He was constantly exchanging ideas by mail with others in this and foreign countries who were interested in better farming. To what extent he foresaw the evolution that would take place in agriculture in the next century and a half, we do not know. But we do know that he himself sold some of his own farm products in interstate and foreign commerce.

We know that he was active in the building of canals that would connect the Seaboard with the great regions of the West. He must have sensed that the development of transportation, together with more productive farming methods, would bring a sweeping change. He must have sensed that farm workers would be released to engage in the manufacture and distribution of many useful things and thus raise the standard of living for all.

Sensing this, it was natural that he should urge Congress to create a national board to promote the interests of agriculture. In his eighth annual message to Congress he said:

Importance Cited.

"It will not be doubted that with reference either to individual or national welfare agriculture is of primary importance. In proportion as nations advance in population and other circumstances of maturity this truth becomes more apparent, and renders the cultivation of the soil more and more an object of public patronage. Institutions for promoting it grow up, supported by the public purse, and to what object can it be dedicated with greater propriety?"

George Washington's interest in agriculture was matched in later years by that of Thomas Jefferson. But not until 1839, when Congress appropriated $1,000 for the Patent Office to use in the aid of agriculture, was Washington's proposal carried out. Then in the years that followed, as farmers generally felt the need for improving their methods of production, the movement spread.

At last, under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln in 1862, more than a half century after George Washington's message, that movement came to fruition. Laws were passed by Congress establishing the United States Department of Agriculture and providing grants of land to aid in establishing State colleges of agriculture. Now, this week, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of these great institutions is being celebrated at the Nation's Capital.

George Washington's own words, which I have just quoted, show that he considered agricultural production even in his time to be much more than a local matter. Yet many changes were destined to come that he could not possibly foresee.

He could not foresee that a protective tariff policy, adopted in the beginning to foster infant industries, would put agriculture at a permanent disadvantage. He could not foresee that mortgages on farm land would become an important part of a highly complex financial system and would be closely linked to the life insurance policies of millions of people in cities and towns. He could not foresee that fixed charges such as taxes, interest and freight rates would push thousands of farmers into bankruptcy whenever the prices of farm commodities collapsed.

He could not foresee that abundant production, instead of lifting the farmer's standard of living, would sometimes crush the farmer under the weight of an unmarketable surplus. He could not foresee the development of the great corporations and labor unions, and how essential it would be for farmers to unite. He could not foresee that farm buying power would be essential to keep city factories running.

He could not foresee the intricate web of economic ties that, extending across State boundaries, would almost completely submerge the local phases of agricultural production and make it more than ever a matter of vital national concern.

Would Act Boldly.

Knowing what we do of George Washington's belief in a national Government strong enough to cope with the problems of his time, and his perception of the importance of agriculture as the foundation of our national life, we can be sure that if he had lived today he would have acted boldly to keep agriculture from going down to ruin. We can be sure that he would not have denied to agriculture advantages which Government has so freely granted to industry.

All his actions indicate that he would have supported farmers in programs of the type they have adopted. Just as he himself shifted from one crop tobacco production to a balanced type of farming in order to save his soil, it seems almost certain that he would have favored Government action to aid farmers as a group to bring their farming operations into balance.

And so, as we pay tribute to George Washington, the first "master farmer," let us resolve that we will be worthy of his great example. Let us resolve that as a Nation we will not neglect the fertility of our soil or the integrity of our farm homes. Let us resolve that, now and always, the great art of husbandry shall have its rightful place in our American life.

Whale Oil Cargo Worth $1,500,000 Is Ordered Seized

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department ordered yesterday confiscation of a $1,500,000 cargo of whale oil if landed in this country by the Norwegian whaler, the Charles Racine.

The oil was processed on the American ship Ulysses near Australia and could be carried to this country only by an American ship, officials said.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Nov. 18.—Chinese apparently were making at least a temporarily successful stand today against Japan's westward advance.

With heavy rains helping them stop Japanese planes and mobile equipment, the Chinese fought desperate rearguard actions to hold their enemy east of the main defense line between Shanghai and Nanking.

In the capital, nevertheless, evacuation of civilians and government bureaus was accelerated by an unofficial warning to the populace to flee path of the Japanese advance.

Japanese Mass Three Columns.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency said Japan's army in North China had massed three columns along a 180-mile front on the Yellow River preparatory to an attack on Tsinanfu, capital of Shangtung Province.

Chinese declared the Japanese still were held above the river which they must cross in the face of strong Chinese defenses to reach the last unconquered North China capital. Tsinanfu is 5 miles south of the Yellow River.

[Warships of Japan's third battle fleet reportedly blasted away Chinese obstructions in the channel of the Yangtze River above Shanghai today, opening the way for a naval bombardment of China's devastated central capital, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

Tokyo Command Unified.

(Emperor Hirohito, at Tokyo, gave his approval for creation of an "imperial headquarters," a highly centralized administrative body with broad authority. The step would co-ordinate Japanese army and navy commands.)

A Japanese spokesman declared there was "considerable action on the front west of Shanghai. He made no claims of new territory, however."

Nanking Exodus Sped.

Two United States gunboats were speeding to the capital to give aid to Americans.

Evacuation of United States citizens from Nanking was not definitely aranged. Some physicians and nurses were expected to move with their hospitals. Several American missionaries already had gone to the Lake Taihu region, 20 miles west of Soochow, to shepherd hundreds of refugees in camps there.

Japanese Ace Air Suicide.

Jazz Holds Sway At Buckingham

Buckingham Palace customs was the attire of men, who arrived in evening dress with knee breeches and silk stockings, instead of the usual gold braid, epaulettes and other ceremonial trappings.

Court attendants explained the King permitted this because he thought it would be "more comfortable."

The women's gowns, varicolored in satin and silk, with sparkling jewels, for the first time had little competition from the men, who wore sober black coats.

Prior to the ball, the King of the Belgians gave a banquet at the Belgian Embassy in honor of the King and Queen, at which the Queen wore a plain unmounted crown for the first time in a London function since the coronation.

The crown, weighing a pound and a half, contained the famous Kohinoor diamond, which was taken from Buckingham Palace to the embassy in a leather bag this afternoon.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 17.— Great Britain today moved her foreign policy toward two distinct goals—weakening of the Rome-Berlin axis through diplomatic talks in Berlin and strengthening of her position with insurgent Spain.

A few hours after Lord Halifax arrived in Berlin for conversations on Friday with Chancellor Adolf Hitler on British-German relations, possibly including Germany's colonial demands, a proposal was made in the House of Lords to have the League of Nations consider Germany's demands.

The proposal was made by Lord Allen of Hurtwood, who asserted that Germany was dangerous in her present "psychological mood."

Government Opposes Move.

Lord Plymouth, undersecretary for foreign affairs, said the government felt there were "serious objections" to such procedure. He pleaded against arguing the colonial question "for obvious reasons," meaning that Halifax might be embarrassed in his forthcoming visit with Hitler.

Britain's move to strengthen her relations with insurgent Spain was the appointment of Sir Robert Hodgson as the first British commercial agent to the two-thirds of Spain now held by Generalissimo Francisco Franco. The announcement brought an immediate complaint from Loyalist Ambassador Pablo de Azcarete y Florez, who addressed a note to the foreign office, saying:

"The Spanish government views this initiative with profound displ asure . . . It implies abandonment of the policy of abstaining from all official relations with those in revolt againt legally established government."

Safety Value Is Aim.

Informed sources disclosed that Britain had asked for the conversations between Halifax and Hitler.

"This is not an attempt to secure an alliance with Germany," this source said, "but an attempt to erect a safety valve for German territorial grievances."

[High Nazi officials were understood to have suggested today that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain visit Fuehrer Adolf Hitler in the near future, according to the United Press—Editor's note.]

In the meantime, King Leopold of Belgium asked Great Britain to assume leadership of his proposal for the establishment of an international organization to solve world economic problems.

Speaking at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor of London, Leopold said:

"The British empire represents such an important part of the human race that it cannot help but realize more clearly than any other nation how closely the fate of mankind is bound up in its own. That is why . . . it is permissible to hope that Britain may play a prominent part in the search for solution of the major economic difficulties."

Tokyo (Thursday), Nov. 18 (AP).—An official source today disclosed Japan is preparing to accord official diplomatic recognition to Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco's regime in Spain. Following upon recognition it was believed Franco would join the anti-comintern pact which links Italy, Germany and Japan.

gathered in this room. If you turn the medical situation over to the Government and deprive the public of the adequate medical care it has been getting, think of the boys and girls, the unborn babies who will suffer."

Charles S. Baker, an attorney, said that lawyers "have been concerned with things that tend to reduce the business a man may expect," but that "we definitely are headed toward collectivism in some degree; all we can do is control the degree of collectivism."

Said the open letter to the society: "The undersigned have for some time hoped that there might be established in this city some plan whereby we and other Federal employes might obtain medical care on a fixed periodic payment basis.

"It is not that physicians or hospitals are overcharging. They are not. It is simply that good medical care has become very expensive—so expensive that in severe illness the cost is more than the average family can afford. The problem is a serious one. For people who are self-supporting and self-respecting charity is no solution."

Constantine Brown, foreign editor of the Star, told the medical society luncheon that State medicine here would not eliminate individual effort.

to have been recruited from impatient partisans of several rightist organizations. As the evidence was studied at the Surete Nationale tonight, authorities suddenly ordered secrecy thrown over the entire affair.

Proof of the continued existence and plotting of the "hooded men" despite a roundup of their members six weeks ago following the bombings of two employers' syndicate buildings fell unexpectedly into the hands of police last night. They captured a truck load of arms and ammunition outside of a house undergoing a perfunctory search on the Rue Ribera.

The driver, unaware of the raid, drove up while it was in progress. The five arrests followed swiftly.

Ministries Guarded.

The bombproof shelters and arms caches were brought to light, and Anceaux was said to have surrendered plans showing that he constructed "military works."

Jean Vasselin, another rightist, was arrested and charged with helping to build the bombproof shelters, one of which was found in the cellar of a garage owned by Robert de la Motte de Saint Pierre, a Royalist.

Special detachments of mobile guards surrounded several important ministries tonight. Guards at the entrance to the ministry of interior and ministry of posts and telegraphs were strengthened.

Batter Down Walls.

The cache on the Rue Ribera produced more than 100,000 cartridges, many of which were for antiaircraft use; 500 machine guns, a large stock of sub-machine guns and six cases of hand grenades.

Throughout last night police battered down walls of the building and discovered secret chambers and a concrete "chamber of command" such as fortresses have.

The chamber contained telephones, loud speakers and microphones connected with other parts of the building and protected by an armored door requiring 30 men to lift. The cheddite was found in a concrete chamber, wrapped in asbestos.

Royal Baby Born To Grand Duchess In Air Crash Died

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—Grand Duke Ludwig von Hesse Bei Rhein and his English grand duchess began a tragic honeymoon today with a trip to Ostend to identify members of his family who were killed yesterday in an air crash.

The late Grand Duchess Cecile, his sister-in-law and one of the victims, was disclosed today to have given birth prematurely to a child in the crash which also killed the grand duke's mother, his brother and the latter's two sons. The baby died.

Ludwig became the grand duke on the death of his brother and today the former Margaret Campbell Geddes, daughter of Sir Auckland Geddes, former British Ambassador to the United States, became the grand duchess.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What to Do? Asks Girl Who Hears That Boy She Loves Is More Interested in Her Money Than Herself.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18 attending school in Washington. My home is in Oklahoma. Last year and this year I have been dating a midshipman at the Naval Academy. I am in love with him and thought until recently that he was in love with me. He had offered to resign from the Academy if I would marry him, but recently I was told by a third person that his only reason for proposing was because he thought my parents were wealthy and that I had money in my own right. This information came from a very reliable source.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, I am very much in love with him and the possibility he is interested mostly in money hurts me very much. I would not want to marry him if I thought he did not really care for me. What shall I do? Should I come right out and ask him if the story is true? Shall I tell him I am not as wealthy as he thinks I am? Or should I just go ahead and marry him anyway? This may seem silly to you, but I should like an answer soon. If we do marry soon, as he has suggested, it means my giving up my college education and his resignation from the Academy. Sincerely, PUZZLED.

* * * *

DEAR PUZZLED: If I were you I wouldn't waste any time turning down this proposal of marriage. I don't know whether the boy is most enamored of your personal charms or your rumored wealth, and I don't think that particular point makes a great deal of difference one way or the other, for the simple reason that he has shown himself lacking in ethical principle and common sense in suggesting marriage which would mean, for him, the sly repudiation of certain pledges already made, and the interruption, for you, of greatly needed mental and social development of a kind you may yet acquire if you continue your education.

* * * *

As for the authenticity of the report that he would marry you not so much for yourself as for your family's money, I can only say that where there is smoke, in the way of gossip, there is usually fire, in the way of fact. Since he is only a schoolboy himself and under suspicions of being a fortune hunter, one infers he has no private income with which to support a wife, and concludes he is not enough of a specialist, in trade or profession, to compel a job which would provide such income. The fact that he is willing to marry when he could not, of himself, provide a home for his bride, suggests that he just might be looking to her to supply the wherewithal.

* * * *

However, even if he were the most up-and-coming of young men, of unimpeachable integrity and fully able to support a wife, still I think an 18-year-old girl who is as socially untried as yourself—who doesn't know a fortune hunter from an honest man, and wouldn't know how to deal with the former if she met and recognized him—has no business to be marrying anyone. Some girls are fairly mature at 18; others are not. I should say you belong to the latter classification, and should give yourself at least five more years to grow up before considering the assumption of mature social responsibilities.

* * * *

So far as this boy is concerned, if you enjoy his society, there is no reason why you shouldn't continue seeing him occasionally, providing you give him to understand that marriage is out of the question for years to come; but you shouldn't see him to the exclusion of all other boys. As a matter of fact, you can learn far more about him through measuring him against other suitors than you can by studying him with no standard of comparison. If you wish to confront him with the rumor, do so. But do it lightly. Maybe you can tell from his reaction whether it's true or not. If you can't, then again I say you are not yet wise enough in the ways of human nature to be ready to marry. M. H.

Popularity Vs. Ideals.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 16 and attend one of Washington's best schools. When I first went there this year I was extremely popular—too popular for a newcomer. Then it dawned on me that the boys were giving me a rush to try me out; to see how far they could go. They got no farther than putting their arms around me. As soon as they found I wouldn't pet, one by one they dropped me like a hot potato. I am still asked out frequently by other boys I meet, but I always go with the feeling that the boy is more interested in attempting intimacy than in me as an individual.

There is another new girl here, in a lower grade, who grants the boys a good many privileges and she is in the height of popularity. She is asked everywhere by boys in all four grades of the high school. I know of several other girls who permit familiarities, too, and they are also very popular.

I am considered very pretty, a good dancer and sing well. I dress well, am peppy and try to be a good conversationalist. With such assets, I don't see why my standards of decency should be held against me. I can't understand why boys wouldn't be glad to go out with a girl who is different in that she doesn't pet and neck. In spite of trying to convince myself, I am beginning to feel inferior, and wonder how I can keep my footing socially. Please advise me. SIXTEEN.

Attitude of Youth.

DEAR SIXTEEN: I thought youth had already provided the answer to such questions as this. The answer, as youth supplies it in majority vote, is that the girl who attempts to attribute her lack of social popularity to the fact that she doesn't "neck or pet" is only fooling herself; that her real trouble is lack of magnetic personality of a kind that would hold boys whose first address may have been one of adventurous curiosity, but whose subsequent attentiveness is one of genuine interest and liking.

* * * *

Perhaps it isn't your refusal of flagrant familiarity so much as your manner of refusal which causes the boys to avoid you after one encounter. If you react with poise rather than panic; with gentle, casual finality rather than with startled shrinking, and perhaps make such rejected overtures the opening wedge to a pleasant discussion of the whys and wherefores of such conduct, inviting a statement of the boy's philosophy and stating your own as tactfully and as interestingly as possible, you might leave the aggressor at the evening's end with a greater respect for and a mounting interest in you.

* * * *

It is my opinion that boys genuinely appreciate, with a sense of relief, the truly companionable girl with whom they can spend a hilarious evening without resorting to emotional experimentation as a source of spurious excitement. But alas, there seem to be too few girls who apprehend this fact. Maybe they're too lazy to make themselves dynamically attractive in mind and spirit. A man who is made to feel that though a girl denies him certain favors, she is still wholly engrossed in the man himself, fascinated by his mind, charmed by his manners, impressed by his abilities, proud of his attentions, isn't going to think otherwise than extremely well of that girl—if she is a girl with whom he, in turn, is proud to be seen. This means, of course, that she must be smart looking, a marvelous dancer (not just a fairly good one), and either bubbling over with the joy of living or possessed of a beguiling serenity of manner. She should also be intelligent, able to think for herself and know when to speak and when to listen.

M. H.

Eden Wears Cuffless Trousers, Sets Style

New York (AP).—A lot of Londoners are wearing cuffless trousers in emulation of Foreign Minister Anthony Eden—the cuffless kind are supposed to hang better around the ankles. That's quite a compliment to Eden because, although he has always been a famed well-dresser, diplomats are seldom style-setters.

Some of the meticulous dressers in this country have the bottoms of their pant legs cut not quite level—slanting down a shade, so they'll fit better around the shoes. You can spot them on Clark Gable.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Cancer Prevention.

SINCE WE DO not know the cause, it seems at first thought a little absurd to talk about its prevention, but there are a number of things which may precede the actual formation of cancer and, according to many, are instrumental in its formation. These are irritations, blemishes of various kinds, chronic and repeated injuries, etc.

The commonest sites of cancer are on the skin, especially of the face and hands, in the mouth, in the breast, the womb and in the digestive canal. The prevention of cancer of the skin depends upon removing blemishes.

The commonest form of cancer of the skin is the easiest of all cancers to cure, if taken early. It usually occurs in the form of little rough patches, usually in middle-aged or elderly people, and particularly those who are subject to a rough skin.

If one of these little patches should begin to bleed persistently, a doctor should be consulted at once.

Irritation of the skin over the bridge of the nose from glasses, pigmented moles, warts and other skin blemishes, are the foci around which cancer often starts. Somebody said that no beautiful woman ever suffers from cancer of the skin because she pays immediate attention to any skin blemish.

A common form of cancer is on the lips at the place where two forms of skin meet. A rough pipe mouth or cigar or cigarette holder is liable to cause an irritation which becomes the site of a cancer.

Clean and smooth teeth are the most important thing in preventing cancer of the mouth. Whenever you find a sore spot in your mouth, you should certainly consult a physician about it. I remember a man who was traveling in Europe and he thought he had burned his tongue with Tabasco sauce. The pain persisted for two or three days and when he went to a physician he found he had a small ulceration there which was possibly cancerous. Prompt treatment with radium probably prevented him from having a far more serious growth later on.

Rough crowns or fillings, jagged, ragged teeth, sharp points, should all be removed promptly.

To Solve Christmas Gift Problems—Sweaters

The gilet at left (No. 2624) of French zephyr yarn may be easily made at home, either for your own suit or as a Christmas gift to some friend. It is a toy deceiver, having the appearance of an entire blouse, but in reality is only a front with neckline and waistline bands. The two-color sweater at right (No. 1323) is fashioned of angora yarn; the tiny collar and buttons enhance the styling. Smart to top either a woolen shirt or accent a tailored suit. A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 17.

IN SPITE of the world's poor opinion of us, as devotees of the gaudiest carnalities and mere time-critterers, I must insist that we do find inspiring moments for the better and finer things. Once a year, for example, we go definitely Booksy, and with the biggest B in the type class.

ALICE HUGHES.

That high-pitched roar you have been hearing from the east was not foreign gunfire, but the howls and bellows of the largest herd of authors ever gathered in one place on this continent. They were corralled, roped and winged for our annual Book Fair detonated by the noble New York Times, our earnest colonial version of London's Thunderer. Literally hundreds of writing men and women wander godlike through the International Building in Mr. Rockefeller's Center, and then mount the rostrum to speak their 5 cents' worth. It's amazing, titanic, superfabulous. One author is difficult, two are a crowd, and 200 are enough to drive even a metropolis mad.

Escaping momentarily from chunky coats and sequined boleros and assuming my disguise 67 B—The Lady Intellectual—I have peered wisely through the fair, and actually witnessed and sometimes touched such literary lionesses as Vera Brittain, Sylvia Thompson, Rachel Crothers, Dorothy Parker, Emily Post, Susan Ertz and Marcia Davenport, to name but a few. All looked like prosperous sisters who are eating well and regularly. I heard a discussion on children's books, in which Mrs. Josette Frank said that tots liked the fast action of the comic strips, and the question is not whether they should read them, but how to stop them. So all week I have been spiritually uplifted by the outpourings of better minds, and am determined to read a book. Tomorrow I attack "Little Dorrit!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Since much of my daily traffic is with press agents trying to sell me a bill of goods, and I am always pleased when one puts over a real whizzer. Such a feat has just been performed by our sly Mr. Monte Prosser, who sold the beautiful love story to the American press. How Grace McDonald wrote F. D. R. begging that her sweetie, Gob Brad Greene, be paroled from the Navy so he could compose tunes exclusively. She's a Broadway dancer and he turned out the score of "Right This Way," a musical comedy, and Monte Prosser did it for these dear young things because he loves them! Good old Monte!

Speaking of love, but on the level, I wrote here recently about Alice Cooljihan, hired by a great Avenue store to act as "clothes counsellor" to New York bachelors. She had barely settled in the thrilling job when she was wooed and won by Harry Atikan, a dashing reporter—married the boy, quit the job and left the store's whole publicity and advertising campaigns flatter than poorhouse flapjacks. And is it irked! They wanted a cute stunt, not a marriage bureau, and Alice was just too cunning!

Neighbor J. P. Morgan has just turned 70, so I dropped over to his Madison avenue town house with a small nosegay. But the fourth under-footman told me he was celebrating in England, so I put the posies on my own piano.

The Southern Highlanders' shop in Rockefeller Center is selling some of the nicest Thanksgiving gadgets in town. They include pompous turkeys made of pine cones to use as place cards, and horses with riders made of corn husks for table decorations. They also vend bundles of pine splinters to sweeten our roaring open fires, if any can be found. Interesting shop—look it up and buy a bit.

Sweaters Enter Glamour Field In New Styling

Metal Yarns Will Go to Cocktails and Dinners With Velvet, Crepe.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

SWEATERS have entered the glamour field and are being noted in the smartest gatherings this winter. The newest sweaters to wear with suits (and sweaters have replaced the tailored blouse as a suit accompaniment) emulate blouses in their styling. Numerous types of yarn, novel stitches, and exotic color combinations distinguish this season's sweaters, which have ceased to be merely an accessory and are often used to accent the entire costume.

Fashioned of metal yarns, sweaters go to cocktails and informal dinners, topping velvet, silk crepe or sheer wool skirts of both street and ankle length. In this event, they are usually styled in basque-blue effect, collarless and with long fitted sleeves. Woolly yarns are also seen in this role, in molded styles contrasting with the skirt in color tone. To accent these, pearls, rhinestone clips and chunky gold and silver colored metal jewelry are popular accessories.

In the realm of sports clothes, sweaters are more important this year than they have ever been. They are made with collarless and unique neckline styles, with short and long sleeves and are decorated with pearl or rhinestone studs in lieu of buttons. They appear in brilliant, light and dark color tones, in lightweight and heavier yarns of simple and complicated patterns. They are especially important in the school wardrobe. As in the case of the more formal-type sweaters, those of the strictly sports and spectator sports versions are important in themselves, not just another accent for the ensemble.

Budget to Beat Living Costs

"PRICES going up and my income's the same," Mr. Jones worries. "What do we do? Put off buying winter coats? Take a chance on the old bus standing up?"

Spunky Mrs. Jones has her answer ready. "Darling, we stretch our income by budgeting it. We don't give up a thing."

When Mrs. Jones started the budget plan—put down in black and white just what she spent on rent, food, clothes and incidentals—she quickly saw where she could retrench.

The food bill—that was a jolt. Rising prices were jacking it up to almost 25 per cent of their income—a high percentage for a family of four.

So Mrs. Jones makes a list of the more inexpensive foods and checks her order with it every day. She discovers new ways to dress up cheap vegetables such as carrots, kale, turnips and cabbage.

While she chats with friends, listens to the radio, she knits pretty, inexpensive dresses and sweaters for herself and the children. She makes dainty lingerie from remnants of good, long-wearing quality.

Mrs. Jones watches household bills, too. She bakes at least two things when she uses her oven—she never turns it on for a few potatoes.

No matter what your income is—$25 or $75—you get more out of it, solve money problems more easily, if you budget. Our 40-page booklet, How to Budget Your Income, shows how it's down. Tells how to manage to get a home of your own, a car, and other big money purchases.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, How to Budget Your Income, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

ON THE SCREEN it's not how much you weigh, it's how much you look as if you weigh. The camera heartlessly adds a visual 10 per cent to a star's weight, and the opera singers who go into the films invariably streamline their figures.

Helen Jepson, the lovely Metropolitan star who recently made her motion picture debut in the "Goldwyn Follies," has come back from Hollywood 15 pounds to the good. Knowing how extremely cautious opera singers are about their reducing—the golden voice must be backed with an iron constitution—I asked how she did it.

"Diet and massage are responsible for the loss of 10 pounds," she said, "and sheer nervous excitement accounts for the other 5." From Miss Jepson's radiantly healthy appearance, I am inclined to believe that diet and massage account for the entire 15 pounds.

Lost Two Pounds Weekly.

She took no chances with her health in reducing. She never lost more than two pounds a week, which is a perfectly safe rate. A moderate diet included three balanced meals a day. Most people who want to reduce make the mistake of eating late at night and nibbling between skimpy meals. Miss Jepson's program was just the reverse—she at three satisfying meals a day, with nothing in between.

This star is 5 feet 5¾ inches tall and weighs 135 pounds, which is screenlined weight. According to her build, she could weigh from 138 to 143 pounds and be within normal range.

One way the movie stars manage to look streamlined in spite of the camera is by the good old hardening-up process of exercise. Compact weight looks slimmer than flabby weight. Helen Jepson does not go in for the usual types of sports, but she gets her exercise in deep sea fishing, surf casting and gardening.

Massaged Daily.

For the leg and thigh muscles, she was massaged for 30 minutes a day over a period of three weeks. At the end of this time the calf measurement had tapered down three-eighths of an inch. If you adopt massages as a method of slimming down, remember that it is a quick and easy way to reduce, but also that it is temporary in its results and must be followed with honest exercise.

Opera Singers Invariably Streamline Figures in Hollywood.

When appetite is in question, it is just as hard for these celebrities to reduce as it is for you. Miss Jepson appreciates good food and says quite frankly that if her career did not stand in the way of her enormous appetite she could eat three helpings of every dish at luncheon and dinner. She adores noodles, she told me wistfully, but hasn't had a noodle in nine weeks!

N. Y. Fair to Have Men's Wear Show

There will be a $500,000 building and a large outdoor area, occupying altogether 67,000 square feet, centered on the theme "man, his clothes, his sports."

In the building will be individual exhibits of every type of apparel from the skin out and the feet up.

What promises to be the high spot will be a big glass aquarium for the water sports, with celebrated swimmers doing their stuff—presumably in the latest swimming suits.

Neatness Marks Genteel Users Of Bathrooms

Consideration for Others Requisite in Habits About Home.

By Margaret Wallace

BATHROOM etiquette is an important factor in the life of a family and particularly of visitors in a household. It has a direct bearing on the comfort of every member of the household.

In a home where there is only one bathroom, consideration must be given first to those members of the household who have to leave first for work or school. The considerate person will not use the only bathroom in the house for such personal tasks as manicuring or dressing the hair.

It is not polite to leave soiled towels lying about in any bathroom, whether it be the only one or one of several in a house. It also is bad form to leave articles of clothing in a bathroom that is used by other people. The well-organized bathroom has a soiled clothes hamper.

Washing out stockings and "undies" in the bathroom may sometimes be necessary, but care should be taken that this is done at a time when other members of the family or guests do not wish to use the bathroom and the "wet wash" should certainly be hung in places where it will not be in the way.

One of the greatest bathroom offenses in most families is the habit of those who have used the bathtub of leaving a "ring" on it. Few households, except those that have private baths for each member of the family and plenty of maids, can manage more than one daily cleaning of the bathroom. Therefore the members of the family should do their best to observe bathroom rules and leave the bathroom neat and clean for the next user.

This also applies to the men and boys of the family. Some men who consider themselves well bred will leave an untidy bathroom and an unwashed tub.

No well-bred guest makes a habit of demanding articles she has forgotten from the hostess. She should go without until she can purchase them at the nearest store. Usually these purchases can be made over the telephone.

Mrs. Caldwell Is Hostess At Sewing Bee for Dolls

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Not as Ladies Bountiful but as bountiful ladies bent on doing their bit for the needy, scores of Washington women dropped into Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell's house on Cathedral avenue yesterday to help get 200 dolls ready for sale next month.

HOPE R. MILLER.

From 10 o'clock in the morning until late yesterday afternoon, the place was a beehive of activity, as society sewed, pressed pleats and ruffles and dressed dolls. The latter had been repaired by handicapped men and women under the direction of the Goodwill Industries of Washington.

This institution, incidentally, is worthy of attention on many accounts. Under its supervision, hundreds of handicapped persons—the aged, the lame, the halt and the near-blind—have become largely self-supporting. Old clothing, worn-out utensils, rickety furniture and cast-away toys come to their hands and are cleaned and mended until they are ready for sale. Proceeds are turned back to the needy workmen on a salary basis.

Within the past few months, many old and broken dolls have gone through the channels of the Goodwill Industries and have emerged with new arms and legs, fresh paint and nicely padded bodies. But before they could be sold, new wardrobes were needed. That's why society circles became sewing circles yesterday under the direction of dynamic Mrs. Caldwell, who makes a success of anything she agrees to do.

Dozens Take to Doll Dressing

Belonging to a committee of women who are doing much to speed the goodwill work, she decided the best way to get the doll-dressing job done was to call in her friends and ask them to help. She did, and they did. Every room of her house was a workshop yesterday, with baskets of silks, satin and calico; humming machines, ironing boards, scissors, needles and pins all over the place.

"It's fun," observed Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, looking up from a gingham ruffle that was to become a fashionable skirt for some miniature miss. "I don't know when I've enjoyed anything more than this siege of sewing."

Over in a corner sat Mme. Hirosi, smoothing out a blonde wig in businesslike fashion. "I cannot sew," she said, "so I brush each doll's hair and arrange the ribbon."

Mrs. William A. Morgan said making tiny Russian boots out of oilcloth was a new experience for her, while Mrs. Pat Harrison declared she had spent hours pressing pleats into a small silk dress she was turning out. In the library and drawing room downstairs, and upstairs in a sunroom and the bedrooms were other groups of women, stitching, snipping and hemming away for dear life. Among them I glimpsed Mrs. Frank Hogan, Mrs. Edward Wilber, Mrs. George Romney, Mrs. Joseph Cotter and Miss Madeline Cotter, Mrs. Andrew W. Cruse, Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, Mrs. Lyle Wilson and Mrs. Albert Warner—to mention only a few.

Mrs. Henry Wallace Among the Helpers

Earlier in the day, dozens of others had come in to help. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace was busy for well over two hours in the morning, and Mrs. Bruce Barton had stopped in to do her part toward the project. Mrs. John W. Guider was there during the day, also Mrs. Samuel Herrick, who is general chairman of the Women's Good Will Guild, and Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson.

At noon around 50 society "seamstresses" were on hand for a buffet luncheon that turned into a gala event, and many more called later to join in the fun. But late yesterday afternoon proof that the fun was largely work was borne out on a table loaded with dolls, completely dressed and ready for the special display and sale of antiques and dolls. This is scheduled to take place from December 15 through December 18, at the Goodwill Industries headquarters, 1214-1218 New Hampshire avenue. Money from the sale will be used as salaries for the handicapped men and women who repaired the dolls.

Among those on the committee, in addition to those already mentioned, are Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Harry W. (Emily Newell) Blair, Mrs. Walker Buell, Mrs. Elsworth Alvord, Mrs. Melville Grosvenor, Mrs. Jay Hayden, Mrs. Channing Carter, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Chester Davis, Mrs. John Herrick, Mrs. Harold Stephen, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Bancroft Davis.

Also, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. James O. Dulin, jr., Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray and Mrs. Stanley C. Sears—all of whom are on the board of trustees for the Goodwill Industries, and Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the antique sale, of which the dolls will be a part next month.

U. S. Ambassador To Be Married

Plans were disclosed yesterday for the marriage of the United States Ambassador to Brazil, Jefferson Caffery, and Miss Gertrude McCarthy, of Chicago, Ill. The wedding will take place in Rio de Janeiro on Saturday.

Miss McCarthy, the daughter of Mrs. D. E. McCarthy, is expected to arrive in New York today. She was graduated from St. Mary's at South Bend, Ind. Her mother is the widow of Col. D. E. McCarthy, chief quartermaster on Gen. John J. Pershing's staff during the World War.

Italian Envoy Takes Opera Box

Soviet Ambassador Also Will Hear 'The Barber of Seville' Monday.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich have taken a box for the performance of "The Barber of Seville" at Constitution Hall next Monday evening. The opera is being sponsored by the Washington Popular Opera Association.

Other boxholders from the Diplomatic Corps include the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; the Minister-Counselor of the French Embassy, Jules Henry; the Minister of Greece, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite; the Counselor for Emigration of the Italian Embassy and Signora Boardelli, and the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thosen.

Toscanini's favorite interpreter of the leading role of Rosina, Margarita Salvi, coloratura soprano of the Paris Opera, will be featured in the opera with the famous comic basso of the Metropolitan Opera, Pompilio Malatesta.

Mrs. Hurja Gives Another Informal Tea in Her Series

Assisting the hostess were Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. W. W. Howes and Mrs. Marshall Diggs.

Mrs. Hurja will entertain at another tea on Wednesday, November 24.

Chinese Ambassador Entertains at Dinner

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, entertained at dinner last evening at the embassy on Woodley road. Acting as hostess for him was his daughter, Miss Yoeh Wang.

The dinner was the second in a series of informal parties planned by the Ambassador.

Aid Goodwill Project

When a large number of Washington women met at the home of Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell yesterday to assist with a project of the Goodwill Industries of Washington, Mrs. George Romney (standing) and Mrs. John W. Guider were among the group. They were photographed in the midst of sewing and inspecting clothes for dolls repaired by handicapped men and women who are working under the direction of the Industries.

The Doughertys Will Live Here

Mr. and Mrs. William Vincent Dougherty, who are now on a wedding trip to New York and Boston, will make their home at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments upon their return to Washington.

Mrs. Dougherty is the former Miss Catherine Mildred Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Parker, of this city. Mr. Dougherty is the son of Mrs. Alice Dougherty, of Flushing, N. Y.

Their wedding took fiplace November 13 at 10 o'clock in the morning at Saint Gabriel's Church in Petworth with the Rev. L. W. Albert officiating.

The bride, who wore white satin, a veil of slightly more than hem length and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, was attended by Miss Hester Ryan as maid of honor and by Mrs. Helen Smith and Mrs. Meredith Capelli, as bridesmaids.

Miss Ryan chose for her costume a gown of black velvet with hat to match and a veil covering the face. The bridesmaids were in green velvet. All of the attendants carried bouquets of yellow and brown chrysanthemums.

Girard Dougherty, of New York, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were William Dougherty, of New York, another brother of the bridegroom; George Brown, of New York, and Seymour Parker and B. Bernard Kreiselmann, both of Washington.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE WASHINGTON DEBUTANTE, 1937-38 model, has a passion for anonymity and not much interest in glamor. She differs completely from her much photographed and much be-jeweled sister of New York, who by the time she is two years "out" has almost as many press clinnigs as a movie actress.

The Gloria Baker - Eleanor Young type just doesn't exist among those who will make their bows to Capital society in the next few weeks. No long and flowing locks or page boy bobs in their repertoire; instead most of them wear their hair short and trim, conservatively but attractively curled. In makeup they are sane—no layers of dead white powder to make them look vaguely like a Marlene Dietrich who has stayed up late too many nights, has seen a great deal of the world and is really rather tired of it all.

OUR TOWN has no Ritz or Sherry's, but even if it did you feel that these young women still would be introduced to society in the old way—at home, or at a conservative club like the Sulgrave. Most of this year's batch are coming out in their own drawing rooms, as their grandmothers did. One reason being, of course, that Washington hostesses still live in houses rather than apartments, contrary to the New York scheme of things.

Even the most rigid dowager hardly would have cause to lift an eyebrow at the conduct of the typical Washington debutante this year. Most of them prefer roller skating or bicycle riding to tea dancing and leaning over a bar. A group of some of the most prominent ones exercise this way nearly every morning along the banks of the Potomac, dressed warmly and smartly in ghillies and tweeds. One girl is an expert horsewoman and another is actively interested in indoor polo.

SOME DEBUTANTES are neither very interesting nor very exciting creatures, but our Washington sisters are strong on "Outside Interests" as well as partying. Several of them are attending college somewhere, taking part in the local festivities only during vacations. One is studying singing, two others are interested in art, and several have more than a bare acquaintance with "good books"—although they might not admit it in public.

Slang is an important part of every debutantes vocabulary, and there is never anything her mother can do about it. This year in Washington anyway, it's the same old stand-by's—"smooth" to describe that satin number from Schiaparelli; "terrific" for the boy who didn't dance with you at your own party, and divine for anything nice in general.

Starting today, with two coming out parties on the books, the next few weeks belong to the debutantes There are dances or teas from now until the New Year, with most of them scheduled for the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. This is the time when the valuable male is most likely to be home from school or college.

THEREFORE, THIS column is dedicated to all the Washington debutantes. May every boy they meet be smooth, and may every party they attend be divine beyond words!

Bulgarian Minister, Bride Reach N. Y. On Way to Capital

They were married last month in Sofia. The Minister has been in his homeland for several months.

Also coming in on the Champlain was Gustavo Pittaluga, father of the second secretary of the Spanish Embassy. The son went to New York to meet his father, who will come to Washington for a visit.

Mrs. John Edmund Cammack, of Rock Creek Manor, is entertaining as her house guest this week her sister, Mrs. Arthur G. Drefs, of St. Louis. The latter recently entertained Mrs. Cammack at her home in St. Louis, and they have just returned together to Washington by plane.

Washingtonians will recall that Mrs. Cammack was formerly Miss Martha Newman, and Mrs. Drefs is the former Miss Artemesia Newman, daughters of the late Edwin A. Newman, one-time president of the Democratic National Committee. Miss Azadia Newman, widely known artist, is still in Hollywood.

Miss Donnelly To Be Bride of G. F. Keenan

Of interest to Washington will be the marriage on November 27 in Ridgewood, N. J., of Miss Eileen Donnelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Donnelly of that place, to Gregory Field Keenan, son of former Judge and Mrs. John J. Keenan, of Washington. The ceremony will take place in the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel.

Miss Donnelly will be attended by her sister, Miss Josephine Donnelly and her sister-in-law, Mrs. James F. Donnelly, jr.

Mr. Donnelly, jr., will be best man for Mr. Keenan, whose ushers will be his brothers, Robert G. and John J. Keenan, jr., James McCormack, of Washington, and Raymond Wilson, of New York.

Miss Donnelly was graduated from the Finch School in New York. Mr. Keenan, a graduate of Georgetown University, formerly was an officer in the United States Army Air Corps and is now with Pan-American Airways.

Henry Luce, widely known magazine editor, has joined his wife at the Carlton Hotel, where they will stay for a few days before returning to their home in Stamford, Conn.

Birth Announced.

Kendrick Upton, formerly of Washington and New York City, and Mrs. Upton (nee Louise C. Butler), of Beaufort County, S. C., announce the birth on November 12, at Lobeco, S. C., of a son, Robert Keith Upton. Mr. Upton is the son of the late J. K. Upton, former First Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury.

Civic Leaders Join Fight To Get Vote for District

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

We can't even spend our sunlight in Washington because a lobby from somewhere in the Middle West is opposed to daylight saving, Mark Lansburgh declared last night at the rally for national representation for the District of Columbia, sponsored at the Y. W. C. A. by the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters.

He spoke from the standpoint of a merchant as one of a distinguished group of Washingtonians, invited by the voteless "women voters" to cite specific instances of ways in which the District suffers for lack of the franchise. "We have no voice in laws which raise taxes in devious and iniquitous ways," he said, adding that lobbyists from all parts of the country have a hearing from their Congressmen while the District has none to whom to appeal.

Mrs. Louis Ottenburg, president of the league, opened the meeting and Mrs. Charles Weston, chairman of government and its operation, presented the speakers. Their time limit of 3 to 5 minutes was set by a traffic light in one corner of the room, they started on green, slowed down on amber and stopped promptly on red, bringing the meeting to a close at the announced hour, 9:30. Capt. Rhoda Milliken presided during the adoption of the leagues study program.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education and past president of the league, pointed to "the infamous red rider" as one of the flagrant instances of situations which could not exist if the District had redress at the polls. She called attention to the difficulty as president of the Board of Education, of interpreting to members of Congress the needs of the District schools. "We should be able to express our views by the vote," she asserted.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of publisher of The Washington Post, who inaugurated the child welfare survey of the District, cited the welfare problems we face because residents of the District have no voice in its government. Cheap labor was brought in to construct Government buildings, she said, and when these were completed and the workers were dismissed, they were unable to get other work or to get home.

"We provide meals for school children because there are so many undernourished families in Washington," she said, "and it must be remembered there are younger children at home who also need food; such conditions are reflected in the high tuberculosis rate and yet the budget of the Health Department is cut.

"It is ten times harder to do welfare work here than in any other city," she asserted.

Theodore Noyes, of the Washington Star, chairman of the Citizens' Joint Committee on National Representation, and introduced by Mrs. Weston as the father of the movement, said he had been working for it ever since 1887 when he returned from a short residence in the Dakota Territory to find the grievances of residents of the Capital worse than those of the Territory.

Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Times-Herald, urged the women to give the final push necessary to win a vote for Washingtonians; Malcolm McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for the District, declared his stand in favor of representation in both houses of Congress and a vote in the electoral college, but of letting the President appoint the Commissioners. James C. Wilkes, Republican National Committeeman, told of the District delegation to the National Republican convention finally gaining representation there commensurate with the District's population over the objection of those who would have denied it because the District had no franchise.

Miss Martha Strayer, of the News, one of Washington's foremost newspaperwomen, pointed out the responsibilities which would fall upon the city if it had the vote; that its citizens would then have none but themselves to blame if conditions were wrong.

Miss Gertrude B. McNally, of the Federation of Federal Employes, representing labor, said "all we get is District Day and usually it 'isn't'—the only way to secure the vote is to work for it."

The final speaker was Mrs. Walter Greenough, chairman of the national league's department of government and its operation, who pledged the help of the branches over the country in bringing the District's plight to the attention of the 48 States.

The closing question of Mrs. Ottenburg addressed to the national committeemen of the two major parties was whether or not representation for the District would be made a plank in their parties' platforms. It received no direct answer—and the red light was on, signaling adjournment.

Soap-and-Water Drive Launched

Little Johnnie of the Washington schoolroom is destined from now on not only to have clean hands, but to want to keep them clean. The Department of Health and the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers are co-operating in the matter and there's nothing he can do about it but make friends with soap and water.

A meeting of local health chairmen of the Parent-Teacher associations was held yesterday in the N. E. A. building, with Mrs. P. C. Ellett, director of health for the D. C. Congress, presiding, and Dr. Joseph B. Murphy, school health officer, present to discuss co-operative measures.

Dr. Murphy asserted one of the chief sources of the spread of infectious respiratory diseases were dirty hands, and members of the P.-T. A. agreed to embark on a campaign of education to make it a desirable thing for small boys and girls as well as their elder brothers and sisters to have clean hands.

The association is also interested in the enforcement of the quarantine law in the District and in a suggestion made by the Health Department that general diphtheria immunization be stressed for children before their first birthday, inasmuch as the most deaths from that disease occur among children of pre-school age.

Speakers at the meeting, in addition to Mrs. Ellett, were Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the D. C. Congress; Mrs. Lucian Jordan, chairman of child health, and Mrs. M. Joseph Hanley, chairman for the physically handicapped child. Each presented to the group plans pertinent to her own department. One phase of the work is that for crippled children taught in specially prepared rooms at Langdon, Twenty-eth and Franklin streets schools.

D. A. R. Goes 'Modern' In Historical Program

History, for the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone modern. They are actively engaged in restoring historic buildings and preserving historic spots, giving new life to a colorful national history that might otherwise be lost.

The work of the national committee at present concerns restorations in national historical parks, including the furnishing of the surrender room in Moore House in Yorktown and aid in the restoration of the one time "military capitol" at Morristown.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, state historian of the District of Columbia D. A. R., will preside at a meeting of her committee in the auditorium of the National Museum this morning at 10:30. Marshall Finnan, Superintendent of National Capital Parks, will give an illustrated lecture open to all members at 11:15 a. m.

JANET RICHARDS, dean of women current events lecturers and an honorary member of the Washington Soroptimist Club, yesterday addressed its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. She talked on Spain, which she knew under the old regime, and traced its history from the reign of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella until the present. She included many entertaining anecdotes about the exiled King Alphonso.

LITTLE ANNOUNCEMENTS of the "Whitehurst Special" to the Kansas City convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs next May, were distributed at the luncheon of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club yesterday. The train will have a large delegation from the Maryland State Federation, of which Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley is president, and which is proud to claim Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, as its candidate for first vice president. Other delegates from the New England States, New York and West Virginia will also be "special" passengers. Mrs. Carl Wheelock, 403 Cedarcroft road, Baltimore, is general chairman of transportation.

The Art and Archaeology League will have its opening meeting Saturday evening at 8:30 in Gunston Hall, through the courtesy of Miss Mary Louise Gildersleeve and Miss Mary Belle Carr. Lieut. Col. Edward Sturdevant, who traveled in Greece last summer, will give an illustrated talk on his trip.

The league, founded years ago by Dr. Mitchell Carroll, has been headed by Mrs. Carroll since his death. Its membership of about 50 meets monthly for programs on art and archaeology, as its name indicates. Often programs are held at the homes of members with refreshments following. It has no need for general business meetings, for its officers carry on from year to year. Dr. George F. Duncan is vice president; Miss Harriet Garrels, treasurer, and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, secretary.

Woman's Club Backs Schools In Chevy Chase

Commissioners Pressed to Issue Bonds for Needed Building.

Additional school facilities for Montgomery County were urged by the Chevy Chase Woman's Club yesterday afternoon in a resolution requesting the Montgomery County Commissioners to reconsider their action and provide necessary funds for so much of the school program as is in need of emergency construction now, and to take steps to provide for the remainder of the program next year.

The county was authorized by the State Legislature at its last session to issue $750,000 bonds for the schools, but the commissioners have not used this authority. Mrs. Irving M. Day, former president of the Parent-Teacher Association of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, and Mrs. Preston Carter Alexander, of the Bethesda Elementary P.-T. A., both spoke in favor of the resolution, pointing out school needs. Mrs. H. F. Yohe spoke in opposition to the plan of a bond issue.

The club also passed a resolution asking additional police protection for Chevy Chase, Md.

Members of the club were given subscription pledges in the campaign to sell bonds for the proposed new clubhouse. The bonds are $50 and are all being sold within the membership. Mrs. Frank A. Linzell is president of the building company, which will meet at the home of the club president, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. A committee of 50 has been named to acquaint the club members individually with the details of the building plan.

Miss Alves Long, chairman of international relations for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, addressed the club on "Render Unto Caesar," the subject on which she spoke before the Women's City Club Tuesday afternoon.

Music for the program was provided by Mrs. Diller Goff, soprano, who sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Myron Witters.

With Mrs. Maguire and Miss Long at the head table were Mrs. R. Seabury d'Espard, chairman of the Child Welfare for the Maryland federation; Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams, Mrs. Harrison F. Fitts, Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, treasurer of the club; Mrs. Robert M. Barnett, Mrs. Day, Mrs. Yohe, Mrs. Linzel, Mrs. William F. Henry, Mrs. Louis S. Murphy, Mrs. F. S. Brackett, Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport Mrs. Marlin H. Velsmann, Mrs. Carl Voeglin, Mrs. J. H. Ray, Mrs. Douglas Griesemer, Mrs. George W. Morey, Mrs. Frederick F. Espenschied, Mrs. Edward H. Helmuth, Mrs. Edgar F. Fowler, Mrs. Robert F. Griggs, Mrs. Arthur E. Nesbitt, Mrs. Robert H. H. Spidel, Mrs. Paul H. Butler, Mrs. Kenneth D. McRae, Mrs. St. Clair T. Thomas.

Sunshine Society Gives Party to Aid In Relief of Needy

Nearly 70 tables were arranged yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel for the annual card party sponsored by the Sunshine and Community Society, of which Mrs. Charles H. Blair is president. The players spent the afternoon at bridge and in patronizing the cake and candy table, adding to the society's fund for charitable work.

Mrs. C. M. Johnson was chairman, assisted by Mrs. F. F. Detweiler, Mrs. Adolph Volk, Mrs. W. M. Taylor, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. R. Claude Wright and Mrs. Stuart H. Boyer.

The society, which was founded years ago by Mrs. Ella S. Knight, carries on, as under her early leadership, aiding needy persons not under the care of any organized agency. It raises a fund of $700 or more each year for this purpose.

Its next monthly meeting will be held the first Monday in December, and another large card party is planned for February.

Miss McQuown to Give Talk on World Affairs

Miss Clara W. McQuown will give the second lecture in her fourteenth season of talks on questions of the hour in national and international affairs this morning at 11 o'clock before the Washington Club. She will discuss the special session of Congress, the conference at Brussels, and the Far Eastern situation.

Miss McQuown's talks are given under the auspices of the Washington Club, but are open to the public.

Among the patronesses are Mrs. C. Willard Hayes, Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Miss Grace Burton, Miss Daisy Prentice, Mrs. J. B. Woods, Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall, Mrs. J. B. G. Custis, Mrs. Warren C. Kendall, Miss Anna L. Fitts.

Speaker Bankhead, Wife To Be Guests of Club

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead will be guests of honor at the dinner of the Women's National Democratic Club, Speaker Bankhead will give an address.

Beginning Saturday, the house committee is sponsoring bridge luncheons at the club every other week. Members may bring guests for 1:30 luncheon and remain for bridge through the afternoon. Proceeds will go toward the new rugs for the clubhouse.

Wallace, Lever Help Dedicate Two Memorials

With Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Former Representative A. Frank Lever, of South Carolina, as the principal speakers, the Wilson and Knapp Memorial arches, connecting the east and west wings of the Department of Agriculture over Independence avenue with the new Extensible Building were dedicated yesterday.

The memorial tablets were presented by Epsilon Sigma Phi, National honorary extension fraternity, in honor of James Wilson, secretary of agriculture from 1897 until 1913, longest period of service for any Cabinet officer, and Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, known as "the father of co-operative extension work."

The program was part of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Department of Agriculture and land-grant colleges.

In behalf of the department, Secretary Wallace accepted the gifts, and expressed appreciation of the great work of Wilson and Dr. Knapp. Presentation was made in a paper prepared by W. A. Lloyd, past grand director of Epsilon Sigma Phi and guiding spirit of the project.

Mitchell Named Aide to Garnett

Appointment of John H. Mitchell, of La Plata, Md., a nephew of Justice Walter Mitchell, of the Maryland Court of Appeals, as an assistant United States attorney for the District, was announced Tuesday by Col. Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney.

Mitchell, a graduate of the University of Maryland Law School in 1933, has been practicing law in his native city. He will be assigned to Police Court. Eugene Carusi, an assistant district attorney, will be promoted to work in the District Court.

The vacancy was created when Clinton D. Vernon resigned to take a position with a law firm.

Pilferings.

The Government, which has built up a tremendous fear in thieves where the efficient and safe Post-office workings are concerned, doesn't seem to have impressed those rogues who are doing some petty pilfering in the Federal buildings, generally. Now comes the FCA with a word on the subject. The Employees Bulletin points out that sometime ago a general instruction (No. 123) was issued on the subject of stealing and some good results ensued, but not results entire. ". . . small thefts are still occasionally reported, and recently a rather serious loss was discovered. You will help in the orderly administration of our affairs and will protect yourself and your fellow employes against loss of personal property if you will do your part in keeping the building free of persons who have no legitimate business here. Report them at once."

Funfest.

The ICC's annual funfest comes off tonight with the Pierce Hall Players offering of "Boy Meets Girl" as the big attraction. The event will be held in the Governmental Auditorium . . . We have read, with some chagrin and amusement, how the Baltimore police raided a bingo game sponsored by the Maryland Federation of Federal Employes . . . A meeting of the Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes will be held in the Raleigh Hotel at 8 o'clock tonight. All nonclassified employes may attend . . . Twenty-eight I. D. R. A. members recently held an overnight outing, and were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Billings, Helen Cranston, Velma Carter, Don Chaney, Virginia Jenkins, Kay Kerley, Merel Sager, Ruth Bohns, Virginia Ayres, James F. Kieley, Ian Forbes, Bertha De Lucia, Sophie Tritch, Maxine Atwater, Philip Vassil, Lucile Davis, Betty Hughes, Helen Clancy, Thomas Hampton, Mr. and Mrs. Matt C. Huppuch, Mr. and Mrs. Justin Herman, Alvin Caplan, Harriett Reed and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Shapiro . . . Department of Agriculture scientists say that they cannot support the "extravagant claims" concerning the rubber possibilities of the Christmas plant (Euphorbia pulcherrima), commonly known as poinsettia . . . The next meeting of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association will be held in the board room, District Building, on Saturday. The group's aim is to secure suffrage for the District; an unannounced Senator will speak . . . The N. F. F. E. says that "the American people have placed the merit system high up on their own list of 'must' legislation," and "it is unthinkable that Congress at this time will evade its clear duty and responsibility." But don't bet any money on it . . . C. F. Orton writes us that the District department, A. F. G. E., will sponsor a special train to Philadelphia for those having tickets to the Army-Navy game on Saturday; the special train will be used for return . . . The Civil Service Commission announces examinations, as follows: Draftsman, and chief, principal, senior, and assistant draftsman, $1,620 to $2,600; optional branches are topographic and statistical, closing date, December 13; associate entomologist (taxonomy), $3,200, closing date, December 13; junior scientific aid (fossils), $1,440, closing date, December 13; senior steward, $2,600; junior steward, $2,300; senior cook, $2,000, Prison Service, closing date, December 6; applications will be accepted at the office of the manager, Washington, not later than December 2, for the position of engineman (Marine Diesel), $2,600, in the United States Motor Vessel Navigation, Department of Commerce.

History.

For the attention of Dr. Leonard D. White, University of Chicago; John P. Simpson, of the Traffic Bureau, ICC, has uncovered some additional information regarding the Provident Association of Clerks, an organization which functioned in the year 1817 and that has caught the interest of Dr. White, formerly of the Civil Service Commission. In response to our request for data on the provident clerks, Simpson has made certain discoveries, which will be forwarded to Dr. White. Can anyone contribute anything to the small sum of facts already assembled on this interesting and early organization of Uncle Sam's employes?

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Of all the museum exhibits in Washington—every Government office seems to have 'em—my favorite is the one in the hall of the Munitions building of the War Department, aimed to show how well the Army feeds its men.

• • • •

The card in the showcase reads: "Rations of U. S. Army at important periods from 1775 to the present time. Exhibit arranged by Subsistence Branch of Quartermaster Corps."

There's absolutely nothing in the showcase—not even a bully beef sandwich on hardtack. That's no way to fatten soldiers for a war.

• • • •

At the President's last public appearance a gentleman tried to barge up to him for an autograph "for my boy." . . . A Secret Service man at the next table plucked his sleeve and gently dissuaded him.

• • • •

It's safe now to offer Counsellor Constantine Oumansky of the USSR embassy a cigarette or even a $1 cigar—he has sworn off smoking . . . Maybe he can't find any American pills to stack up with—I almost said to smokestack up with—those disguised stogies that pass for cigarettes in Moscow.

"—the President begins to listen?"

In a daredevil mood the b. w. and I hired a tandem bicycle at the foot of the Washington Monument and pedaled along the Potomac around to Hains Point, opposite the War College, through the gloaming . . .

It's probably the finest 7-mile cycle jaunt in the world at dusk—lovely as a Whistler etching and, on the practical side, flat as a table, past the polo field and the links.

• • • •

"That's the American way of it," he explained. "We've got some English tandems, too; they're fixed for the lady to sit in the rear."

It costs a quarter extra per hour for the man to get out in front, on the English tandem. Worth it, too, if you're a dominant male and don't trust your wife's steering.

• • • •

State secret: When the Japanese Ambassador addressed the journalists at the Press Club, they all stood up once, as a token of respect . . . But when the Chinese Ambassador spoke two weeks later, the newsmen stood up three times—when he entered, when he began to talk, when he concluded . . . I'll bet that burned up the cables across the Pacific.

• • • •

Washington seems to be about 9 to 1 pro-Chinese, pro-Russian and pro-Loyalist Spain, and about 9 to 1 anti-Japanese, anti-Franco, anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi, conversationally, that is. But the Capital is also about 9 to 1 against any foolish threatening gestures by the United States for or against any of these 100-per cent virtuous causes.

"—difference between English and us"

Visitors are coming out of the White House with slightly higher knee action and a bit of sparkle in their eyes.

The reason: The President is said to be a bit more attentive to what they have to say; he has become quite a good listener during the last few weeks.

• • • •

Memo to the Smithsonian Institution: The b. b., who is 4 years old, has solved the puzzle about the carved jaguar found in the ruins at Chichen Itza, with a saddle on its back, which the scientists thought might have been a throne or an altar.

"It's a hobbyhorse!" he asserts.

We're willing to lend him to the Smithsonian for week-ends.

• • • •

A little group of nervous economic royalists were discussing, over their cocktails at the Mayflower, the chances that Mr. Roosevelt might decide to run for a third term. They were of the unanimous opinion that he shouldn't do it; might be fatal to him politically unless he happened to be re-elected.

• • • •

Then some antiquarian in the crowd, with an air of discovery, asserted that only one Republican President has ever served two full terms . . . That was Grant, who would have taken a third term if one had been lying around handy . . . They decided that what was not enough for Grant is too much for Mr. Roosevelt.

Chest Drive Totals Half Of Its Goal

A total to date of 95,634 contributions amounting to $1,114,575.22 or 54.13 per cent of its goal of $2,059,000, was announced yesterday at the report meeting of 1,000 workers of the Community Chest, in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The advance from the previous day was 23,697 contributions amounting to $231,866.87.

Sees Good for Donors.

York City, and Mayor-elect Maurice J. Tobin of Boston. Tobin last night broadcast from an airplane over a short-wave transmitter a plea for the unfortunates of Washington above which he was flying as he spoke.

Speaking briefly at the luncheon meeting Tobin said that in all his campaigns for funds in Boston, he "had never seen such an enthusiastic group of fund raisers."

Praises Enthusiasm.

"I can appreciate the work you are doing," he continued, "and I can truthfully say that after listening to the enthusiasm which appears to be overflowing this assemblage, I have not the slightest doubt this Community Chest campaign is going to reach its goal.

"We should never forget," concluded Boston's mayor-elect, "that, but for the grace of God we might be in the same position as those who now need our help."

"I should like to remind you of the equally important service that you are rendering to those men and women from whom the money is being collected. It has been my lot to be drafted into the money raising campaign of a good many social and philanthropic agencies.

"I have not hesitated to ask for large amount, and I have never had any feeling that those who gave were doing me a favor. On the contrary, I always felt that I was doing them a favor.

resentative Bruce Barton, of New

"The money will do great good for those who need physical help, but the collecting of it does imperishable good for those who need the spiritual help of outward living. Write on your banners the great words of Rousseu, 'The dead take to their graves in their clutched fingers only that which they have given away.'"

In his address from the plane, Tobin paid tribute to the public spirit of Washington in its drive for funds.

"Today, in the Willard," said he, "I saw nearly 1,000 out of this volunteer army of workers, and their enthusiasm impressed me so much that I do not see how the Community Chest of Washington can fail in its efforts this year.

"Last year the Community Federation of Boston, which corresponds to your Chest, had a goal of $4,250,000. We raised $4,480,000. Our 1938 campaign is just about to start and I should like to carry back to Boston a report that your drive went well over the top."

Various Units Report.

Dwight F. Davis of the Special Assignments Unit announced 110 gifts amounting to $93,000; Group Solicitation Unit, reported by John L. Vandergrift, had 5,353 grifts, totaling $30,043.26; The Governmental Unit reported by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wayne Chatfield Taylor, announced 15,895 contributions, totaling $84,171.31; Metropolitan Unit, reported by Chauncey G. Parker, jr., had 1,136 contributions, amounting to $17,419; Randolph Leigh, of the Suburban Unit, reported 1,053 contributions, totaling $6,400.49, and the Capital Unit reported 148 gifts amounting to $834.50.

Women Win Prizes At Umbrella Court

Women carried off the honors last night on the Washington Post's Umbrella Court of the Air, presented over the National Broadcasting Company's local station WMAL.

In tie for first place were Miss Eleanor B. Fitts, and Mrs. D. W. Levandowsky. The second prize of $5 was won by Maurice Barmash. Miss Tillie Steiner, J. La Roach and Arthur H. Johnson tied for third place.

Those desiring tickets for the question and answer program presided over by Judge McCarthy of the Umbrella Court of the Air may obtain studio seats by addressing their requests to Judge Tom McCarthy, Umbrella Court of the Air, in care of The Washington Post.

Unified Fight Against Fare Rise Planned

Move for Solid Front in Battle Made as New Meeting Is Called.

A move to unify civic forces opposing the increase in street car fares in the District was launched last night as three citizens' associations adopted resolutions demanding sale of token at the rate of three for 25 cents rather than six for 50 cents.

Recognizing that widespread but unco-ordinated opposition to the fare increase has sprung up in the last week, a meeting of delegates from civic and labor groups was called last night by the Conference Against Increased Streetcar Fares.

Edna Anderson, secretary of the committee sponsoring the conference, announced that William A. Roberts, jr., former peoples counsel, and William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, would address the gathering, to be held in the Old Interior Department Auditorium Tuesday night.

"While there has been a great deal of resentment expressed by many organizations and individuals against the recent unwarranted increase in trolley fares," the statement calling the meeting said, "it yet remains to co-ordinate all these scattered efforts into some form of unified protest."

Resolutions favoring sale of car tokens at half the present rate were adopted by the Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association and the Conduit Road Citizens Association.

Members of the Chevy Chase group referred to the Public Utilities Commission's reply to their inquiry as an "obvious evasion of the issue" and John R. Manning, chairman of its utilities committee, charged the Capital Transit Co. with reduction in service coincident to the fare raise. Manning said buses had been taken off the Connecticut avenue route to Chevy Chase. A rehearing on the increase order was demanded.

The Conduit Road Association voted down a recommendation for reopening hearings on the fare increase and planned to ask a change in bus schedules on the Burleith line better to accommodate school children.

Crook Flees as Plea For Police Is Read

A letter from the Washington Board of Trade urging co-operatio with policemen was being read to members of the Conduit Road Citizens Association last night just as the night watchman at the Palisades Field House, where the association was meeting, was chasing away a would-be burglar.

Members of the association were told about it after the meeting.

Sales Tax Urged By Citizens' Group

A sales tax exempting clothing under $15 and food and medicine was voted by the Southwest Citizens Association last night as a substitute for the business privilege tax.

The association also considered a proposal to change the name of Fort Humphreys to the Army War College, as it was fomerly known. The following were named committee chairmen:

Maj. Robert A. McClure, Samuel A. Leishear, Robert D. Marshall, J. M. Shaffer, Mrs. Mark W. Grey, J. P. S. Neligh, Harry Wender, Mrs. Bessie Parish, Mrs. Libbey S. Special Session Blocks District Legislative Aim

House Committee Will Not Meet Before January, Palmisano Says.

District legislation appeared to be blocked yesterday so far as the special session is concerned. Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, announced that he will not call a meeting before January unless "an emergency" develops.

Palmisano attributed his change in plans to advice from Majority Leader Rayburn that the House will confine itself to the Administration legislative program during the present session. Consequently, Rayburn said, there will be no District days, although the House so far has transacted no legislative business.

Previously, Speaker Bankhead had said that "the door is open for consideration of District lgeislation," and indicated that District days would be allowed.

Although Chairman King of the Senate District Committee stated that he will call his committee together just as soon as the Commissioners submit any bills, prospects for enactment of any District legislation before the first of the year appeared slight.

Senator King said he did not know at this stage whether Senate leaders will hold a calendar day, but he said his committee will hold hearings and make reports if any new local bills are forthcoming.

The District Commissioners meanwhile are awaiting the report of the Prettyman committee on District government reorganization before drafting any legislation.

Because of Palmisano's decision, there is little likelihood that joint hearings on reorganization will begin before next year. As a result the chances of effecting a change which has been talked of for the last several years are substantially reduced.

Rowan Lauds Modern Mural As Good Art

Modern murals and mural painters were defended last night by E. B. Rowan, superintendent of the Treasury Department's section of painting and sculpture, who expressed his belief they are "equal to those of the great period of Italian art."

Speaking before the Association of Architects at their tenth annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, Rowan defined a mural as a painting "designed to fit a particular place in a particular wall."

"So far as technique is concerned," he said, "I don't think that is the thing which determines whether a paiting is a mural."

Among murals in the newer public buildings of Washington, recently the occasion of much controversy, Rowan gave special praise to those of Boardman Robinson and Leon Kroll in the Department of Justice Building.

He complained that architects often specify mural paintings for purely decorative effects. Rowan described such painting as "wall paper," and added:

The association's bronze medal for its 1937 exhibit was awarded to the Quartermaster General's office of the War Department and accepted by Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins. Prizes were also awarded to the following for work exhibited:

D. C. Girl Remains At Mission in Path Of NipponAdvance

Among American missionaries remaining at their posts in path of the Japanese offensive on China's "Hindenburg Line" is Miss Katherine Thompson, 5236 Illinois avenue northwest, attached to the Independent Mission in Kiangyin, the United Press reported last night.

She has been in China two years. Only two weeks ago her family received a letter from her, detailing a vacation and saying she was undecided whether to go back to the mission or heed the warnings of officials and friends not to return. Miss Thompson is a graduate of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind.

Elderly Man Loses Life in Road Accident

An elderly man was killed instantly yesterday when he was struck by a truck near Beltsville, Md. His death followed by little more than 12 hours that of a District fireman, who died in a crash at Seventeenth street and Benning road northeast.

The Maryland traffic victim was Thomas Dallas, about 60, who has resided for the last two months at the Canary Tourist Camp, near Beltsville. As he stepped into the highway in front of the camp he was struck by a truck driven by Shirley L. Owens, of Clarksville, Va.

Private Stanley Duda, 28, attached to No. 6 Engine Co., was the District fatality.

Baptist Chief Lauds Gain in Church Zeal

Dr. Weaver Says Revolution in Religion Has Occurred Here.

A "revolution in religion has taken place in Washington during the last ten years, and we have not known it," declared Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, at its closing session in Calvary Baptist Church last night.

Dr. Weaver stated that there had been an increase in the last decade of 300 per cent in the number of religious organizations in the Nation's Capital belonging to minor bodies. Whereas there had been only 38 minor religious groups in Washington in 1916, and only 56 in 1926, when "Washington religiously was a typical American city," there had been an increase to 218 in 1936 of the number of independent, minor religious bodies here, according to the historical research record division.

Want Capital Date Line.

Taking as his subject, "Washington, the Mecca of Missionaries," Dr. Weaver asserted that these various groups "desire to have strong religious organizations in the Nation's Capital. All want a Washington date line for their publications."

This "religious revolution," which Dr. Weaver stated is widespread, "although there seems to be a concentration in Washington," has caused defection and disturbances in some of the Baptist churches in Washington.

However widely these newer religious groups differ in some respects, they have certain common characteristics, said Dr. Weaver, one of which is that "all are critical of the frigidity and the formalism of the older evangelical bodies, and they are opposed to our denominational organizations and programs and do not hesitate to assail all secretaries and pastors who are paid salaries of $3,000 or over."

Dr. Weaver, however, praised the enthusiasm of many of these minor religious bodies and urged others to emulate their missionary zeal.

Praises Missionary Heroism.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, speaking at the closing session of the convention on "Shall We Withdraw From the Orient?" cited the heroism which had been shown by missionaries in sticking to their posts despite dangers and discouragements, and declared that this was not the time to desert the Far Eastern missionary field.

The meeting closed with an address by Dr. J. C. Robbins, of New York, foreign mission secretary for India and Burma of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, who spoke on progress in those fields.

 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1937 19

This Morning

Georgetown-Maryland Go Into Huddle.

By Shirley Povich.

It was quite ducky the way Georgetown and Maryland folks broke bread and tossed off a few at the University Club yesterday. There were handshakes and laughter and buck-slaps and an exchange of little pleasantries that looked pretty genuine. Come what may Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium, friendliness was the keynote yesterday.

POVICH.

These were the people, then, who on Saturday would figuratively send their football teams at each other's throats for 60 minutes in the fourth annual Georgetown-Maryland game. Coach Jack Hagerty of G. U. and Coach Frank Dobson of Maryland, swapping trade secrets; assistant coaches hobnobbing like frat brothers and Georgetown's Gabe Murphy, the graduate manager, beaming over the scene as if, indeed, it mattered not who won or lost.

They were giving the lie to claims down the street—at George Washington University—that local rivalry is unhealthy, that it spawns ill-feeling and acrimony. For three years, Georgetown and Maryland have been meeting on the football field and the only charge to be brought against the rivalry is the accusation that for three years they have given Washington its best football game.

A Strange Beginning.

It all began, back in 1934, as an afterthought—this Georgetown-Maryland game. For 30 years they had not met in football. Georgetown, meanwhile, had gone big-time. Maryland, content to move in Southern Conference circles, annually declined a place on the Georgetown schedule. For ten years, the possibility of the game was not even broached. It was put down as an impossibility.

And then, in the late fall of 1933, Gabe Murphy feathered his cap with a stroke that stamped him as a man apart from other Georgetown graduate managers before him. He negotiated a Georgetown-Maryland game for '34.

At the office of H. C. (Curly) Byrd, then assistant to the president and athletic director of Maryland, Murphy was arranging basketball and baseball games for Georgetown. Football with Maryland, Murphy had believed to be a closed issue. Never had it entered their conversations. And then, with his hand on the door and about to bid Byrd good-day, Murphy said casually: "How about a Georgetown-Maryland football game next year?"

Well, you could have floored Murphy with this typing finger when Byrd looked directly at him, smiled, and said, simply, "Why not?"

Tribute to Hagerty.

The resumption of Georgetown-Maryland relations is, directly, a tribute to youngish Jack Hagerty, Georgetown's coach. Because Byrd, in amplifying his decision to accept a Georgetown game, said:

"Maryland was open to a game with Georgetown just as soon as Georgetown learned to accept defeat gracefully. I've seen Hagerty's teams play and I know they play clean football. Nothing should interrupt a Georgetown-Maryland rivalry as long as Hagerty is at the Hilltop."

Well, you shoulda seen Hagerty and the schoolmasterish Frank Dobson, Maryland's coach, discussing Saturday's ball game yesterday as if they'd be downright sorry if it ended in anything but a tie. It was utterly disarming as they talked of their team's strong points and weaknesses with a fine unconcern for the possibilities.

"Well, Jack," Dobson was saying, "you know what I tell my kids every Friday night. I tell 'em my work is done for the week and from here on the game is their baby. It would be nice on Saturdays if they remembered everything you told 'em."

"Yeah, that would be nice," said Hagerty. "How about that pass you threw against us in 1935? I had been drilling my kids against that play for a month. I told 'em Maryland would be sure to use it—that Guckeyson would start a long run to his right and then pitch the ball diagonally to an end on the other side of the field. I didn't think they'd ever get caught napping on that play.

"And you know what happened. You finally pull it on us and all of my kids are sucked in toward Guckeyson's side of the field like dumbunnies. I felt like running out there and kissing Buscher when he dropped Guckeyson's pass in the clear. My kids couldn't have caught him with a motorcycle."

"Hope You Don't Mind."

"Well, Jack," Dobson was saying, "just for your information we're using that play against you again this year. Hope you don't mind.

"Anyway, Jack, I can sympathize with you. Last week up at Penn State we knew the play that they'd try to beat us with—a pass. All week we thought we had it licked. My boys were making the play look silly with their defense. And then, with the score tied in the last quarter, Penn State came up with that pass and beat us. Whenever you turn your team loose on the field all you can do is sit back and pray."

There hasn't been a really disturbing note in the three years that Georgetown and Maryland have played their game. Overexuberant

Cooper and Little Soar to 72 and Fourth Place Tie.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 17 (AP).—Horton Smith and Jimmy Thompson tied with Tony Manero, of Boston, and Mike Turnesa, of New York, to win the pro-pro golf tournament here, a preliminary to the mid-South championship, which starts tomorrow.

Each team had a score of 132 for the 36-hole event. Playing against comparatively easy course conditions yesterday, each scored a 64. Today, through a stiff breeze, each did a 68.

The scores mounted today under changed conditions, and the Smith-Thompson and Manero-Turnesa combiantions were among the few able to play under 70.

Dick Metz and Frank Walsh, the Chicago team, added a 68 to their 66 of yesterday and finished in third place with 134.

Harry Cooper and Lawson Little, who toyed with the course yesterday and made a record best ball score of 63, had much tougher going today, and played a 72 for a total of 135.

This dropped them into a tie for fourth place with Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, and Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and George Slingerland, of Greensboro, N. C., and George Low, of Philadelphia.

Tomorrow a field of 100 will play the first round of the 36-hole mid-South open tournament, opening another winter tournament swing for the roving professionals.

Devitt and Bullis Meet on Friday

Washington's little "service" classic is due again Friday when Bullis and Devitt, powerful prep rivals, clash at 3 p. m. in American University Stadium.

Since both institutions are preparatory schools for West Point and the Naval Academy, some of the color and tradition which surrounds the major battle is present when these bitter prep foes get together. Bullis won a decisive victory in last year's game, but will probably enter into Friday's contest on the short end of the odds.

Texas Cotton Seed Pea Cake On Menu of Navy's Bill VIII

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17.—Bill VIII, goat mascot of the Navy football team, will dine on his native Texas fare on Thanksgiving Day in order to be ready for the Army mule at the Army-Navy game the following Saturday.

Basil M. Halbert, the 7-year-old grandson of B. M. Halbert, sr., who raised the goat, sent the dinner today to Capt. E. W. McKee, director of athletics at the Naval Academy. In pencil, on the back of a letter the grandfather sent the officer, the grandson wrote the following to "dear Bill the Eighth:"

"I am sending you a bag of Texas cotton pea cake for your dinner Thanksgiving Day. I do want to beat that Army mule in the football game so my grandpa can tell me about it."

The senior Halbert, accompanied by a daughter, will attend the Army-Navy game as a guest of the Navy Athletic Association.

Woodrow Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wilson, Ozona, Tex., plays in the Army team backfield. Halbert referred to him as a "neighbor's boy," pointing out that Ozona is "only 30 miles west of Sonora."

Tony Dupre Signed to Meet Armand Sicilia

New England Bantamweight and Featherweight Titleholder Added to Monday Night's Card in Eight Round Co-feature.

New England's bantamweight and featherweight champion, Tony Dupre, a prototype of the great Frankie Fleming, will bow in at Turner's Arena Monday night on the all-star boxing show to be presented by Turner and Ahearn.

Dupre yesterday was signed to meet Armanda Sicilia, Chicago Italian, in an eight-rounder—one of three eight-round bouts on the card.

Matchmaker Ahearn also closed out yesterday for a battle between Ray Ingram, the local boy, last winter ranked eighth by the National Boxing Association, and Baby Manuel, the transplanted Mexican, who once whaled the daylights out of Featherweight Champion Henry Armstrong. Eddie Ross is handling Manuel.

Matchmaker Ahearn outbid promoters in several cities for Dupre's services. He has wone some 60 fights, scored 11 knockouts, had 6 draws and lost 3 matches. He is French Canadian, and won the New England championship last winter by defeating Joey Archibald in Providence—the last fighter to whip Archibald since Joey came to Washington to go on his seven-match rampage.

Last Monday night Dupre beat George Harder in a feature bout in Providence. Sicilia, his opponent, appeared on the kiddies' free luncheon card, beating Baby Manuel. Sicilia has decisioned, among others, Leo Rodak, Jackie Wilson and Nick Camarata.

Ahearn revealed that the matching of Dupre against Sicilia and Manuel against Ingram produced an elimination featherweight tournament to unearth an opponent for Lou Gevinson.

C.U. May Use Ex-Easterner

John Carvelas Groomed for Guard Position.

A former Eastern High School football star and local boy may get his chance to make good a week from today, Thanksgiving morning at 10:30, when Catholic University plays host to University of South Carolina's Gamecock's in its homecoming.

Inasmuch as Coach Dutch Bergman currently is drilling Arthur Sabo, iron man right guard, at an end position, indications are that John Carvelas, one of Eastern's greatest linemen of recent years, will be started in Sabo's position.

A most valuable reserve all season, Carvelas, a sophomore, would welcome this opportunity, only the consistency and downright brilliance of Sabo and Capt. Victor Sochon relegating him to reserve duty previously.

Forced to experiment at the ends due to the loss of Victor Miller and Joe Bunsa and doubtful condition of John Kasunich's injured leg, Bergman also is drilling Rocco Pirro, 200-pound fullback, at an end. In the event of emergency either Pirro or Sabo, he feels, are alert and formidable enough to hold down wing assignments.

Until far into twilight the Cardinals drilled yesterday, driving determinedly for the Gamecocks in what is expected to prove their greatest homecoming ever at Brookland.

Spartans Chill Wounds.

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 17.—That gag of chopped ice that is carried onto the Michigan State practice field every day isn't used to calm Coach Charlie Bachman's headaches.

Bachman has found that prompt chilling tends to minimize after effects of bruises and sprains, so he has the bag and the "ice man" on call daily.

England in Soccer Lead.

Middlebrough, Eng., Nov. 17 (AP). England took the lead in the international soccer tournament today, defeating Wales, 2 to 1. The victory placed the English in a position where they need only 1 point to take the title won last year by the Welshmen.

Sutherland's Top Halfback Duo Is Present Goldberg and Stebbins

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—A smoothly-geared halfback combination, the usual thing at Pitt, is one of the reasons the undefeated Panther is up there again with the nation's great football teams.

While there was nothing but dignified silence among Pitt Athletic bosses today over rumors from California that Pitt would not be invited to the next Rose Bowl game, the usually mum Dr. John Bain Sutherland turned to thoughts of "the boys" who have won 101 games for him during his career as Panther coach.

The reminiscing Scot said:

A Fine Pair.

"Goldberg and Stebbins make up the finest halfback combination since I began coaching at Pitt."

Sutherland-trained halfback pairs have included such stalwarts as Gibby Welch and Jimmy Hagan (present Pitt director of Athletics); Warren Heller and Paul Reider; Howdy O'Dell and Mike Sebastian, and last year's duo, Bobby Larue and Goldberg.

The other night at a rally given by dental students in celebration of the passing of the 100-mark in victories for Sutherland, the coach said feelingly:

"Really, I feel guilty about this hundred victory business. I have never won any games. They were won by my boys—my players. I salute you—my players of all the years.

"And when I hear any criticism of you, Pitt football men, I am ready to fight."

Pitt Power.

This year's "twins" have between them netted nearly half the power-gained yardage of the Pitt team. Biggie carried the ball 90 times for 567 yards and Curley 123 times for 429 yards.

Both are elusive, hard to stop and are equally good blockers and defensive players. Goldberg actually has scored only four touchdowns, and Stebbins three, but they have been prime factors in driving the ball into position for some mate to carry it across.

There will be some consolation for Pitt opponents in the fact that Dr. Sutherland loses nearly all of his first string team through graduation this year, but there probably will be others just as hefty to replace them.

And Goldberg and Stebbins will be back.

All-America Debate Near Final Stage

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 17.—The all-America debate for 1937 approaches the semifinal stage with the contest for most positions on the mythical collegiate gridiron squad still very much in doubt. Climax games this week and next will have vital bearing on the outcome of the race for all-star honors.

FRANK.

Of last year's two all-America holdovers, Yale's mighty captain, Clinton Edward Frank, of Evanston, Ill., seems a certain repeater. Frank has played amazing football this season under all conditions as well as heavy pressure. Only Dartmouth checked the Eli leader on the ground and against the Indians his passing helped save the day for the Blue. Frank closes his varsity career against Harvard this Saturday.

Joe Routt, of Texas A. and M., all-America guard in 1936, has come bounding down the stretch at a sensational pace, to make up for some lost ground, but it remains to be determined whether he can overtake a number of rivals now conspicuous in the Associated Press all-star roundup. They include his own teammate, Virgil Jones, as well as Capt. Leroy Monsky, of Alabama; Al Lezouski, of Pittsburgh; Francis Tweddell, of Minnesota, and Vard Stockton, of California.

East Has Good Backs.

THE EAST, with five unbeaten teams in the Nation's "first ten," has produced an outstanding crop of backs, tackles and ends this year. By contrast the Middle West and especially the Big Ten has not contributed as much material as usual to the All-Star debate. The Old South has produced exceptional ends and linemen. The Southwest has developed a flock of fine backs and ends. In the Far West, most of the discussion centers around the stars of three teams—California, Colorado and Santa Clara.

GOLDBERG.

EAST—Pick of the "Ivy League" talent comprises Yale's Clint Frank Columbia's versatile Sid Luckman, Cornell's Bud Holland, Negro end, and Dartmouth's Bob MacLeod, fleet halfback. Chif among the individual reasons for Pittsburgh's high ranking are Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, powerhouse halfback; Tony Matisi, tackle, and Frank Souchak, end. Fordham's great line features Alex Wojciechowicz at center and two superb tackles, Ed Franco and Al Babartsky. Villanova has twin standouts in John Mellus, tackle and John Wysocki, end.

Rice Sophomore Sensational.

SOUTHWEST—Ernie Lain, Rice sopohmore, has been the backfield sensation in this rip-roaring sector. His return to action, after missing the first three games because of an injury, touched off Rice's drive to the conference lead, and topped the performances of Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian; Bill Patterson, Baylor; Hugh Wolfe, Texas; Dick Todd, Texas A. and M.; Dwight Sloan and Jack Robbins, Arkansas. Other Southwest stars: Jim Benton, Arkansas, and Sam Boyd, ends; I. B. Hale, tackle, and Ki Aldrich, center, Texas Christian; Routt and Jones, guards, Texas A. and M.

SOUTHEASTERN — Linemen have captured most of the expert praise, headed by Capt. Leroy Monsky, of Alabama, guard; Capt. Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt's "iron man" center; Bo Russell, tackle, and Ralph Sivell, guard, Auburn; Eddie Gatto, tackle, Louisiana State; Bill Jordan, end, Georgia Tech, and Frank Kinard, tackle, Mississippi. Best backs include Joe Kilgrow, Alabama; George Cafego, Tennessee; Fletcher Sims, Georgia Tech; Walter Mayberry, Florida, and Jim Fenton, Auburn.

Compromise Reached at Confab Here

Brundage Again Heads Games Group; Tokyo Plans Begun.

The American Olympic Association re-elected Avery Brundage president for four years last night and began plans for American participation in the 1940 Olympic games in Tokyo.

Other A. O. A. officers were re-elected at a quadrennial meeting which, members said, restored harmony among amateur associations which have been battling each other for many years.

Most notable of these feuds was that between the National Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the two strongest members of the Olympic committee.

A compromise reached between the two groups providing equal representation on sub-committees for sports in which both are interested was ratified by the association with but one dissenting vote.

Brundage, about whom a storm raged at the Berlin Olympiad last year because of his dismissal of Eleanor Holm, swimming star who drank champagne, was re-elected by acclaim and without opposition.

A brief floor fight preceded ratification of the N. A. A. U. and N. C. A. A. compromise, which was reached by committees of the two organizations at 3 a. m. yesterday after a stormy six-hours.

Dr. John Brown, jr., Y. M. C. A. representative, sought unsuccessfully to amend the agreement by reducing N. A. A. U. and N. C. A. A. representation on the committees and inclusion of two members to be appointed by the Olympic committee.

The compromise amended the A. O. A. constitution to provide six delegates each from the N. A. A. U. and N. C. A. A. on sports committee in which both are interested. A thirteenth member will be elected by each committee from among nominations by the A. O. A. president.

The N. A. A. U. had sought to retain its 6-to-4 advantage on the committees, while the N. C. A. A. sought five delegates on committees to be composed of nine men.

The amendment provides that where associations other than the N. A. A. U. and N. C. A. A. have a "major interest" in a particular sport that they shall have proportionate representation with other interested organizations.

Gustavus T. Kirby, A. O. A. treasurer, reported that the Olympic committee finances are "in good shape." He said the committee has "a grand total in cash of $74,913.55."

Many athletes who paid their own way to the Berlin Olympiad are seeking a refund from the committee. The meeting discussed these claims, but decided to refer them to the executive committee.

Coast Crown, Bowl Bid Up On Saturday

California-Stanford Game to Settle Issues; 80,000 Expected.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—The Pacific Coast conference football championship, which isn't worth anything, and the Pasadena Rose Bowl bid, which is worth plenty in gold and glory, will be decided when unbeaten California meets twice-beaten Stanford before 80,000 or more fans in the Stanford Bowl.

The odds favor California, and so far overboard have California supporters gone for a team which revives memories of Andy Smith's "wonder teams" that some fantastic bets are being made.

California supporters are giving from 6 to 14 points and are putting out from two to four dollars to catch one. Yet—Stanford has a chance, a very good one—history might be made again in this game which northern California knows as "the big game"—the Yale-Harvard of the far West.

Similar Situation.

The situation was somewhat similar two years ago. California, in its first year under Coach Leonard (Stub) Allison came up to its third week in November with an unbeaten record. Stanford's record was not quite so impressive, and it had lost to U. C. L. A.

But the Indians came back, whipped Califronia 13-0 and went to the Rose Bowl where they halted Southern Methodist.

California comes up to Saturday's game with victories over St. Mary's, Oregon State, Washington State, Cal Aggies, Pacific, U. S. C., U. C. L. A., Oregon and a tie with Washington. Stanford goes in with victories over U. C. L. A., Washington, U. S. C. and Washington State; a tie with Oregon State and defeats by Santa Clara and Oregon. The Santa Clara loss, however, doesn't count so far as the conference is concerned and it's on the conference record that the Rose Bowl bid is offered.

California's conference record is five victories and a tie; Stanford's four victories, one defeat and a tie. Stanford, by winning Saturday, can tie for the title.

Fight for Trophies.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 17.—Two fine trophies will go to the winner of the Thnaksgiving Day football game between Allegany and Fort Hill high schools. Both schools hold two legs on the Times Trophy which was placed in competition in 1933 and which will be retired with the third winning.

Yale Forgets Rose Bowl, Preps for Crimson

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—If there's anything farther from the thoughts of Coach Ducky Pond, his assistants and his football players this week than Pasadena's publicity-scientific bowl of roses, it probably is Einstein's theory of relativity.

Even that might be more important to the Elis as they drive for the clinching, climactic clash with Harvard. The relativity theory might serve to explain why, on parallel performances, Yale isn't more of a favorite for this renewal of their rivalry that will pack Harvard's stadium without the aid of a public ticket sale.

Of their mutual rivals, Yale has whipped Army, Princeton and Brown and tied Dartmouth, while Harvard lost to Dartmouth and Army and won only from Brown and Sub-normal Princeton. Not even a quagmire has been able to jam the gears of the smooth Yale offense, while the crimson machine has backfired badly on its two rainy-day ventures, against Dartmouth and Davidson.

Yet, given a dry field, Harvard stands an exceedingly fine chance of putting the first blot on Yale's sterling record. The first-string Crimson backfield operatives who absorbed so many bruises in swamping Princeton that they weren't available for the Army game are back in harness, and the hard-charging, clean-blocking line is ready to throw a crimp in the plans of Clinton E. Frank and associates.

It's quite a task they've set themselves, Frank has been responsible for the scoring of at least one touchdown in every game this season, personally has scored seven in the last two, and, Yale teams, while winning 24 of their last 34 games—24 of 32 under Ducky Pond—have scored at least once in every one.

Besides settling the big three issues, this game also will give Yale a chance to tie a sailor's knot around the "Ivy League" championship. The Elis have won three and tied one, to Dartmouth's two victories and two ties. Victory for Yale will give it the title no matter what heavily favored Dartmouth does against Columbia. A tie for Yale and triumph for the Indians would leave them all-even. Dartmouth will be able to retain the championship it won last year only if the Elis are beaten.

The concluding league game of the year will be played Thanksgiving Day between Cornell, now in third place, and Pennsylvania, kept out of the cellar only by the fact that Princeton has been beaten more often.

By Jack Cuddy.

Since the bewhiskered old bozo escaped from the sanitarium before this grid season opened, he has been trying to pick football winners each week by communing with the spirits. I repeat: He has been t-r-y-i-n-g to name the victors. And the results have been particularly trying for me, his sponsor.

I appointed Divvy my official pigskin predictor last year before the 1936 season opened. I chose him after a quartet of competent physicians had pronounced him definitely nuts. I gave him the job because I realized that one must be robustly nuts to take football picking seriously. And Divvy did very well during the '36 season. I forget his average, but it was away up there.

* * * *

But this year his efforts have been pathetic. For example, last week he had 33 right, 18 wrong and 7 ties, for a right and wrong average of .647. This disgrace chopped his average for the season down to .701. He is doing so poorly that I fear he may be regaining his sanity. Divvy explains his slump in different fashion. Today's letter reads in part:

* * * *

"I can't contact the spirits this season as good as last because I was working in a padded cell in '26 and had perfect spiritual atmosphere. Since I ran away from the sanitarium I've been hiding out in Bowery flop houses. There's always too many people snoring on the floor, etc., to get spiritual atmosphere. So I'll forget the spirits this week and go scientific.

* * * *

"A chemist is letting me use his laboratory an hour a day if I sweep out the place. I got the birth dates of all the coaches at the public library and have cast their horoscopes. I strike a medium between the precipitates in the laboratory test tubes and the horoscope results—thus arriving at this week's winners, for sure."

* * * *

East.

Syracuse over St. Mary's—RDL.

Holy Cross over Carnegie Tech., Pittsburgh over Penn State, Dartmouth over Columbia, Lafayette over Lehigh, Navy over Princeton, Villanova over Temple, Maryland over Georgetown, Manhattan over Niagara, Army over St. John's.

* * * *

Midwest.

Minnesota over Wisconsin—By two touchdowns.

Illinois over Chicago, Indiana over Purdue, Duquesne over Marquette, Kansas State over Iowa State, Oklahoma over Oklahoma A. and M., Nebraska over Iowa, Missouri over Washington of St. Louis.

* * * *

South.

Tulane over Sewanee, Texas Tech. over Centenary, Duke over North Carolina state, Citadel over Erskine, Louisiana State over Louisiana Normal, South Carolina over Presbyterian.

* * * *

Pacific Coast.

California over Stanford—Only choice on form.

* * * *

Baylor over Loyola of Los Angeles, Arkansas over George Washington, Kansas over Arizona.

Rocky Mountain.

Colorado College over Colorado State, Greeley State over Colorado Mines, Bringham Young over Montana State, Montana over Idaho.

students invaded each other's campuses last year in an outbreak of school spirit and caused a nocturnal commotion that resulted in apologies by student leaders at both schools. But it served only to solidify the good feeling.

And in these days of big gates and squabbling over guarantees and percentages, Georgetown and Maryland are a pair of trusting rivals. They've never deemed a written contract necessary. It is all very brotherly.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Nansemond, performing in the colors of Howard Bruce, Maryland sportsman, led from flag fall to finish in the Crescentia Purse, the feature race of today's Prince Georges County turf program. Hustled along by Johnny Longden, the leading rider of the meeting, Nansemond came to the finish line two and a half lengths in front of a photo-finish for second money in which O'Buddy was given the call over Joanny. Three other juveniles were forced into the "also ran" department in the sprint of 6 furlongs.

A crowd of 9,000 participated in the afternoon's sport and the majority of the customers placed their wagers on the chances of Nansemond, third in the Selima Stakes at Laurel last month. After all was said and done the successful bettors collected at the rate of $3.80 for each $2 investment.

The daughter of Bud Lerner and The Squaw was away flying, but soon had Joanny, often her rival, pressing her for the lead. However, each time that Joanny tried to take the lead, Longden let out another notch and Nansemond drew away. In the meanwhile, O'Buddy was under heavy restraint and last in the field of six.

Joanny Begins to Tire.

In the stretch, Joanny began to weaken and dropped back. O'Buddy, finally given a chance to run, rushed at the wire, but too late to cause Nansemond backers any concern, but in time to take the place award.

For the first time in two years and the second time in the history of the daily double in Maryland, the winning combination was "7 and 7." Those who invested in the lucky pair received a $97.20 pay-off.

Ghost Queen, owned by Mrs. W. H. Denham, of Washington, and trained by her husband, scored a surprise victory in the first race. With most of the heavily played horses hampered by a poor start, Ghost Queen went on to win by a head from Mon Doit. Room Service and Songstop, virtually left at the post, were third and fourth in the field of 12 juveniles. Jockey G. Napier gave the winner a strong ride.

Spotless, the favorite, had to be much the best to win the second race. The Ed Crump filly came from far back to win a nose verdict in a photo finish from Clean Heels. Secret Chatter took third money in another camera decision. Jockey J. Lynch rode the $6.30 winner. Ever Grand, a longshot, set the pace for three-quarters before dropping far out of it.

Abbots Hour Wins.

Another of the fit H. P. Metcalf horses scampered home in the third race. This time it was Abbots Hour, one that was up in the final strides to win by a neck over Long Shot, a jumper, making his first start on the flat. Flag Unfurled was a charging third in the field of cheap maidens. Jockey L. Turner put up a good ride on the winner, which paid $10.70.

The Medway Stable's Legion, at a $22 mutuel, took the measure of 11 others assembled for the fifth race. The son of War Time was excellently handled by Apprentice Jockey Ralph Eccard, being steadied along to the stretch, where he turned on the real speed and downed Fast Express and My Elsie.

Alexandrine, installed the favorite in the sixth race, due to a feather-weight assignment, won by a length from Master Lad, with Indomitable third in a field of five. Apprentice Jockey H. Moran handled the winner well. Master Lad had some trouble at the first turn and hung after making a bold bid in the early stretch.

The final event went to S. Buckland's Ladino. Dearzin was second, and Touche taking the small award. Ladina rewarded his backers with a $6.20 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPOTLESS, $6.30, $4.60, $3.10; CLEAN HEELS, $5.80, $3.70; SECRET CHATTER, $3.70.

SPOTLESS, lacking early speed, improved position with rush approaching stretch and wore down CLEAN HEELS in final strides. CLEAN HEELS within striking distance of leaders from start, rallied to drive to take command between calls, but was unable to resist winner. SECRET CHATTER weakened after following pace of EVER GRAND.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old maidens. Start poor from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:42½. Off 2:43. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABBOT'S HOUR, $10.70, $4.70, $3.30; LONG SHOT, $10.10, $6.90; FLAG UNFURLED, $8.60.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:08½. Off 3:09½. Winner, Howard Bruce's br. f. (2), by Bud Lerner—The Squaw. Trained by F. Garrett. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGION, $22.00, $11.90, $7.00; FAST EXPRESS, $4.60, $3.70; MY ELSIE, $3.40.

LEGION, steadied along after breaking forwardly, rallied when placed to drive in stretch and disposed of FAST EXPRESS in closing 20 yards. FAST EXPRESS set pace and weakened suddenly approaching finish. MY ELSIE forced the pace and closed willingly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06½. Off 4:08½. Winner, T. Lee Evans' b. f. (3), by St. James—Hanoviamne. Trained by T. L. Evans. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALEXANDRINE, $5.30, $2.70, $2.40; MASTER LAD, $4.70, $3.00; INDOMITABLE, $2.90.

ALEXANDRINE, forward from beginning, disposed of INDOMITABLE to take command entering stretch and held sway thereafter under driving tactics. MASTER LAD, carried wide by winner at first turn, was taken to inside, came between horses while making bid and hung in final sixteenth. INDOMITABLE weakened after settling to the front.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:38½. Winner, S. Buckland's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADINO, $6.20, $4.40, $2.80; DEARZIN, $8.40, $4.90; TOUCHE, $13.10.

LADINO, rated during the early running, went to outside for racing room, took command inside eighth pole and was drawing out at end. DEARZIN, within striking distance of leaders, came gamely in final test. TOUCHE ran MISS EFE into defeat, but weakened in final sixteenth.

Jack Manders, Hutson Lead

Bears and Packers Stars Climb in Scoring.

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Jack Manders, ace back of the Chicago Bears, and Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers, took the lead in individual scoring and pass receiving in the National Professional Football League last week, according to statistics released today.

Manders tallied 16 points in Sunday's game with the Brooklyn Dodgers, to take a 58-57 lead over Clarke Hinkle, Green Bay fullback. Dutch Clark, player-coach of the Detroit Lions, held third, with 45 points.

Hutson passed Gaynell Tinsley, of the Chicago Cardinals, having caught 31 passes to the former L. S. U. star's 28. Hutson needs only four more to break the mark of 34 he established last season.

The Packers also have the leading passers, in Bob Monnett and Arnie Herber, with an efficiency of 50 and 47 per cent, respectively. Sammy Baugh, of the Washington Redskins, has completed 61 passes, but rates third in efficiency, with 45.1 per cent, just a fraction ahead of Pat Coffee, of the Cardinals, who has a mark of 45 per cent.

Mediocre Irish Eleven Still Draws at Gate

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 17 (AP).—Although the team has suffered a few lapses this season, the fighting Irish of Notre Dame still can attract the fans. They figure on playing to four straight sellout crowds before the season ends November 27.

They had packed houses for the Minnesota, Pitt and Army clashes and most of the seats for Saturday's Northwestern game already are gone. For the finale with Southern California, the crowd isn't expected to reach the 56,000 limit but it won't be far short.

'Father of Chanel Swimming' Is Dead

Walmer, England, Nov. 17 (AP).—Capt. Harry Pearson, 72, who piloted many swimmers across the English channel and sometimes was called the father of channel swimming, died today.

Among those he guided were Edward Temme, only man to swim the channel in both directions, and T. W. Burgess, who crossed the channel in 1911.

Olsen and Steele to Grapple Tonight in Feature at Turner's Arena

Finish Bout Is Scheduled For One Fall

Cliff Olsen, the Swedish blade, and Ray Steele, the California journeyman wrestler, will have it out tonight at Turner's Arena in a feature match that is expected to produce a good old fashioned blend of villainy and mat science.

The bout will be one fall to a finish, which means that there won't be any stalemate such as the one-hour draw that resulted from last Thursday's grueling scrap between Olsen and Chief Thunderbird.

Steele is out to protect his local four-match winning streak, amassed since he returned to his mat wars in Washington some three months ago. There was a time when the Californian wrestled before nothing short of capacity crowds. Promoter Turner feels that Ray still maintains some of the magnet that was his when Jim Londos was ruling from the mat throne.

Before tonight's match is very old, Olsen will discover that Steele will not stand for any of the capers the Swede cut up in his battle with Thunderbird last week. There won't be any stooge such as Swift Eagle in Steele's corner, unless Ben (Evil Eye) Finkel decides to risk his eye-throwing prestige. And if Olsen starts kicking Steele around like a gong, the Californian really will show the Minnesotan how rough he can be.

A change in tonight's semiwind-up, a 45-minute match, will find Mike Mazurki, the former all-round athlete from Manhattan, opposing Bob (Rebel) Russell in place of Gino Garibaldi, the Italian bomber.

A Camden, N. J., promoter appealed to Promoter Turner to release Garibaldi from his match here in order that the Italian might fill in for Chief Thunderbird there tomorrow night. And Turner, the big-hearted Joe, said "O. K." Thunderbird, it seems, was called away to his native Vancouver yesterday (flew by plane) to settle a tribal dispute over fishing rights. In case you don't know, the chief rules his tribe like his pappy and grandpappy did.

Making his debut in a special 30-minute bout will be Pat Meehan, British Empire champion, appearing in the East for the first time. The County Cork Irishman meets Joe Maynard.

In the other matches Abe Kashey, Syrian, meets Jim Coffield, sailor boy, and Jack Hader, meanie, meets Stan Sokoliks, meanie. First bout is at 8:30 p. m.

Georgetown's Recent Success Makes Terp Clash a Toss-up

The late-season success of Georgetown's football team has served to narrow sharply the betting odds which three weeks ago stamped Maryland as an overwhelming favorite to win Saturday. Yesterday, in Washington wagering circles, the odds most frequently quoted were 7 to 5, with Georgetown the underdog.

Until Georgetown tied Penn, 0-0, led Manhattan by two touchdowns until the final half, tied West Virginia and then defeated New York University, Maryland was a tremendous favorite. The Old Line team in succession had beaten Virginia, Western Maryland, Syracuse, Florida and V. M. I.

A powerful factor in the current rating of Georgetown and Maryland is the presence on the Maryland squad of Pershing Mondorf's kicking toe. Twice this season, Mondorf's place-kicks have snatched victory for Maryland in the final minutes, and he will be an ever-present threat Saturday at Griffith Stadium.

Line Superior.

Georgetown's line is rated a bit superior to Maryland's despite the Hoyas' losses this season, but in the backfield, with Jarring Jim Meade to provide the power, the versatile Charley Weidinger to throw the passes and Mondorf to shoot at the field goals, Maryland appears to have an edge.

The game Saturday, however, promises to provide a battle within a battle. Georgetown supporters concede Meade to be no better football player than Joe Mellendick, new star of the Georgetown backfield. On the indiviudal accomplishments of Meade and Mellendick the final result is expected to depend in a great measure.

Both Coach Jack Hagerty at Georgetown and Coach Frank Dobson at Maryland withheld their squads from scrimmage yesterday, refusing to risk injury at this late date. Neither team is particularly well equipped with reserves, but Georgetown is better fortified in that respect than Maryland.

The fact that the odds favor the Terps at 7 to 5 is a tribute to the Hoyas, who three weeks ago would have been underdogs at 3 to 1. Their comeback against Penn, West Virginia and New York U. has changed the complexion of the game. They are rounding into the form predicted by students and alumnus that apparently left defeat a horrid word on the Hoya schedule.

The fact that three defeats blot the Hilltoppers' record may call for an explanation. Two of the three teams boasting the wins are among the Nations undefeated elevens, Holy Cross and Lafayette, while the other, Manhattan, has won three major intersectional victories, two since upsetting Georgetown here.

Maryland, like their opponents, have also looked good in defeat. They totaled five touchdowns and as many conversions in losing to Penn and Penn State, but their defense has allowed seven.

Twice the Terrapins were practically unanimous underdogs in intersectional contests, against Florida and Syracuse, but on each occasion the 60-minute line and the punch of Meade, Mondorff and Weidinger has carried them to victory.

Handball Opener To Jack Schwartz

Substituting quality for quantity, the Y. M. C. A. handball tournament was off to a slow start last night with only three out of seven matches played as scheduled.

District Champion Jack Schwartz got off to a flying start, however, winning a fast match from George Newman, one of the District's ranking players, by the score of 21 to 19, 18 to 21, 21 to 11. In the other two matches Wendlandt defeated Moore 10 to 21, 21 to 19, 21 to 16 and Woodward-Vineberg trounced Payne-Berman 21 to 16, 17 to 21, 21 to 14.

Trojans, Millers Win on Court

The Trojans and National Savings and Trust staged a close battle last night in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High, the Trojans winning out in the last few minutes of play 30 to 29.

Debates on All-Americas Are Reaching Final Stage

North Carolina, at end, is rated among the best performers this conference has ever produced. Leading scorer is Paul Shu, sophomore and one-man backfield at Virginia Military. Honey Hackney, Duke; Eddie Berlinski, North Carolina State, and Crowell Little, North Carolina, are also highly regarded.

Compare White, Clark.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN—Not since the days of the renowned Dutch Clark has this area seen the likes of Byron (Whizzer) White, of Colorado University, now the country's leading scorer and a Phi Beta Kappa student who knows all the answers, on or off the gridiron. Other noteworthy performers: Ferdinand Dreher, end, Denver; Karl Schleckman, tackle, Utah, and Gene Moore, center, Colorado U. Montana's Milton Popovich, minus the benefit of any league spotlight, has been a standout back all season.

PACIFIC COAST — Most observers give major credit for keeping California in the unbeaten class to Halfback Sam Chapman and two guards, Vard Stockton and Claude Evans. The Golden Bears, tied only by Washington, also have standouts in Vic Bottari and John Meek, backs, and Harry Schwartz, right end. Phil Dougherty, center, occupies the key role for Santa Clara's unbeaten team. Bud Ericksen, center, and Vic Markov, tackle, are Washington's main contributions to the All-Star argument. Star backs include Joe Gray, Oregon State; Ambrose Schindler, Southern California, and Merle Miller, Washington. John Ryland, at center for U. C. L. A., and Frank Peters, Washington end, also are prominently mentioned.

Minnesota Linesmen Standout.

BIG TEN—Minnesota lost a potential All-American back, Andy Uram, who broke his wrist in midseason, but the Gophers have three standouts up forward in Capt. Ray King, end; Francis Tweddel, guard, and Lou Midler, tackle. Harold Van Every, sophomore Minnesota back, has shared conference ball-carrying honors with Jim McDonald, of Ohio State, best known for his blocking; Corby Davis, Indiana; Cecil Isbell, Purdue; Don Heap, Northwestern, and Stark Ritchie, Michigan. One of the most promising sophomore backs is Nile Kinnick, of Iowa. George Miller, Indiana center, has been conspicuous for his placekicking.

Upsets Mark Fistic Bouts In Tourney

By Jack Munhall.

Before another capacity crowd in Turner's Arena last night the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament swung into the final round with a card that promises to eclipse any ever seen in this annual event.

There were upsets and numerous near upsets as the boys battled through the semifinals, and in all it was the most thrilling program of the tournament to date. The climax of the evening came, appropriately enough, in the final bout with a knockout seldom seen except on the screen.

The finalists in the open classes include: Bob Brodigan, Police Club, and Jim Kustenas, Washington Boys Club, 126 pounders; Whitey France, Terminal Y, and Carrol Wright, also from Terminal Y, 135 pounders; El Brookman, Chestnut Farms A. C., and Bobby Mathias, National Guard, 147 pounders; Creighton Allen, Northeast Boys Club, and Jack White, Terminal Y, 160 pounders; Bobby Schwartz, A. B. and W. Terminal, and Bobby Grimm, National Guard, 175 pounders; Jim Brady, Georgetown University and Earl Daniels, unattached.

Bobby Grimm and Jim Lindsay, Quantico Marine entry, were the principals in the last-minute drama that sent more than 2,000 thrill saturated spectators home murmuring to themselves. Grimm, virtually unchallenged in the light-heavyweight class for several years, found young Lindsay a formidable foe. The boys fought on even terms throughout the opening two rounds and when the final heat started, it would have been hard to pick a winner.

But Grimm alleviated the uncertainty midway in the third round when he exploded a terrific right-hand squarely on Lindsay's chin. The blow sounded like a firecracker and it was so obvious that Lindsay was out, that the refree did not even count.

Probably the most interesting fight on the entire card was the battle between Creighton Allen and a real game kid, Jim Perrow, National Guard color-bearer. Allen, a heavy favorite, was forced to the limit in gaining a unanimous and highly questionable decision. Perrow fought smartly, tying up the stronger Allen in the clinches and keeping a snaky left in his face at all times. Although Allen landed the heavier punches, Perrow was scoring three hits to his one.

Drake had piled up a sizable margin in the opening round before Mathias' blasting right hand smashes began to take their toll. And it was one of these puches that flattened Drake after 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the second round.

One particularly stunning upset was registered in the 126-pound class of the novice group. Leo Marcopolous, classy, blond southpaw from Police Club, who swept through his opening fights with great ease, found Bob Hagedorn too rugged and dropped a three-round decision.

Pardon My Glove...

By Jack Paulus.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Willus Britt, who became Willie at the age of 4 when he was teething on a ring post, looked up at the waitress and said, "I'll have a beer, too."

Thirty years ago, when Willie was 24, he would never have ordered a beer. Because Willie was a fighter in those days, and they were the days of Abe Attell, Leach Cross, Battling Nelson, Ad Wolgast, Joe Bedell and Oakland Frankie Burns.

But today Willie is a trifle gray. He squints at you through glasses that frame a face unmarred by those years in the ring. He worries about the extra pounds that snuggle around his middle and complains maybe a little about those broken ribs.

Willie's been in the boxing game 40 years. He has been everything from a bucket boy to a promoter and back down again. He knows the fight game and he's always ready to talk about it.

"I'm on a mission, Jack," he says. "A mission to bring three world championships back to the white race. This is the first stop of a journey from coast to coast. I'm going to find a featherweight, a light-heavyweight and a heavyweight to take those titles from Henry Armstrong, John Henry Lewis and Joe Louis.

"It may sound screwey, but it's a fact. And this is no slap-happy former pug that's tellin' you this. I'm the same guy who swung the towel for Leach Cross when the fighting dentist fought 41 rounds against "Fighting Dick Hyland. I'm the same guy who helped Tex Rickard promote the Jack Johnson-Jim Jefferies fight in Reno in 1910.

* * * *

"New York needs talent. There aren't enough good fighters to go around. All I want to do is be the contact man. And I think there's enough talent from here to the coast to bring plenty of life back into the boxing game.

"I watched them fights at the Arena Monday night and they go to prove what I say. Two boys on that card are topnotchers and can go a long way. I mean Lou Gevinson and Georgie Abrams.

"Gevinson's got two glaring faults. He don't follow through for the kill. The other, though, I think is more important. He hooks his right. Somebody oughta teach him how to jab with that right. A right jab is more effective and it don't leave him open as much as that hook he tried to throw. The kid's got the makings of another Lew Tendler.

* * * *

"And this boy Abrams, he's a wonder, Jack. Five or six more fights, well-matched to keep his confidence, and he's ready for the big-time. The only thing I can say about him is that he's 'too kind.' But he'll get over that when some guy hurts him.

"They don't work hard like we usta in the ole days. They don't do road work. They don't concentrate on science. Jack Blackburn, who's now Joe Louis' trainer, usta stand on a handkerchief and you couldn't hit him! That was science.

* * * *

"And the modern boys gotta have mouthpieces when they go inta the ring. Whadda you think we did? Stuck a piece of cotton in our mouths to break the force of the blow!

"Now they gotta have purple tights with monograms on 'em and nifty bathrobes and talcum powder for their shoes and sliced oranges to chew between rounds. What they need is a lotta road work and beef stew.

"The old-timers were proud of their ring science, too. Prouder than most was durable old Battling Nelson, who rigged up a dummy after his active days to demonstrate various punches.

"Well, me and several other guys staged a benefit in Washington and corralled other big shots like Jack Johnson, Mike Gibbons and some others. And Nelson was first in the ring with his dummy.

"First, he tole the crowd he would show Ad Wolgast's favorite punch. It was a left jab. Then he said he would show Jack Johnson's favorite punch. Again a left jab.

"The Durable Dane went on with this lecture while me and Gibbons and Johnson had a fit. It was almost 10 o'clock before Nelson had finished and in all that time he had demonstrated nothing but the left jab. That was science, for you!

* * * *

"And they were tough, too. There was that fight between Cross and Hyland. They met in 'Frisco and the fight was scheduled for 45 rounds. It rained, but Cross insisted on fighting.

"And did they battle? The bell rang and they'd meet in the center of the ring like two steam-engines. They wore 4-ounce gloves with their hands bound with black wire tape.

"Every blow cut like a razor. Blood was streaming down their faces. Each one hit the canvas at least ten times. In the forty-first round Hyland caught Cross on the jaw and he took the count.

"And I had some job working in Cross' corner. Between rounds I had to wring that big towel with water and then fan him with it.

"For three weeks after the fight I couldn't lift my arms. How much did I get? Seven bucks. Them was the good old days, all right!"

Wheat Whirls Up With Frost In Argentina

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Excited over indications of rapidly enlarging frost damage to Argentine crops, wheat prices soared upward 5 cents a bushel today, the furthest immediate limit allowed.

Forecasts pointed to another frost threatening Argentina tonight, the sixth frost in three weeks. Chicago wheat specialists said freezing temperatures menaced the most promising areas in Argentina, and that a crop could not repeatedly experience freezing and not lose in bushel yields on a large scale.

At the close the Chicago wheat market was 4½ to 5 cents above yesterday's finish; December, 94⅞ to 95; May, 95⅛ to 95¼; July, 88¾ to 88⅞. Corn, ⅞ to 1⅛ up; December, 55 to 55⅛; May, 58 to 58⅛. Oats, ½ to ¾ advance. Rye showing 1¾ to 2¼ bulge, and provisions unchanged to 20 cents dearer.

Asso. Gas Suspends Convertible Interest

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Associated Gas & Electric Co., in a letter to stockholders made public today, announced suspension of interest payments on the series A and series B convertible obligations. Directors of the company said payment would not be justified in view of an adverse trend in current earnings.

Around $50,000,000 of these obligations, which are convertible into preferred stock at the company's option, are outstanding. A year ago this time interest payments were resumed on the two series in 5-year, 4 per cent scrip, and all arrearages were paid, likewise in scrip.

Associated Gas Output.

New York, Nov. 17.—For the week ended November 12, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 89,439,213 units. This is an increase of 1,845,411 units or 2.1 per cent above the comparable week a year ago.

Steel Industry Expects Rise In Auto Orders

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—Prospects for early improvement in demand for automobile steel were cited by Iron Age today in its weekly summary of iron and steel trade conditions.

"So drastic has been the drop in steel operations, it may furnish its own correction," it said. "The automobile industry, although proceeding more cautiously than had been expected, is experiencing an increase in sales, which if continued will bring higher production, provided new threats of labor trouble do not materialize.

"The small takings of steel by the automobile manufacturers indicate a rapid reduction of inventories which may result soon in replenishing buying."

Steel ingot output was estimated by the trade journal at 35 per cent of the country's capacity, lowest since 1934, excepting one week of July, 1935. Last week's average was 41 per cent.

Freight Rates.

"The belief persists in the steel trade," continued the summary, "that the Interstate Commerce Commission will render a speedy decision on the plea of the railroad for higher freight rates and that a favorable result will be almost immediately followed by inquiries for cars and locomotives.

"In the construction field there is a fair amount of public work but private projects have almost disappeared. Efforts at Washington to reassure business and to check deflationary tendencies may be almost immediately helpful if directed toward tax revision. The steps that are being taken toward a building revival will require months before the steel and related industries could possibly benefit to any large degree.

"Export buying offers more promise, so far as volume is concerned, as some American mills lower prices to meet foreign ideas. Concessions from $5 to $8 from domestic prices have been given on some recent orders. There is a modest revival of interest in pig iron from European buyers, and a possibility that Japan may come back into this market."

W. C. Potter Elected To N. Y. Reserve Board

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—William C. Potter, chairman of the Guaranty Trust Co., has been elected a class A director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, it was announced today. Potter succeeds George W. Davison, chairman of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Co., whose term expires December 31.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Back and Fill in Less Active Trading; Wheat Higher; U. S. Bonds Firm.

New York, Nov. 17.—Stocks held a steady tone with irregular price movements in sales volume which for the first time since October 4 failed to reach a million shares. United States bonds were a shade firmer and dollars improved in the foreign exchange markets. Wheat had a good day on damage reports. Futures at Chicago rose the day's limit of 5 cents a bushel. December grain closed at 94⅞ cents a bushel.

A dull stock market usually gives the tape watcher an impression of weakness, but stocks today were not so bad as they seemed. Opening prices were moderately lower and then a modest recovery lifted most of them a fraction to 2 points. The best levels were held until the last hour when prices drifted after backing and filling in light offerings.

United States Steel common spent most of the day going between 56½ and 58½. Railroad shares weakened on disappointing freight loadings and indications of poor earning statements for October. Caterpillar Tractor drifted into new low ground on a loss of more than 2 points. Coca Cola recovered 5 points on one sale. Owens Glass gave up 3 points, which left it at a new low price. Chesapeake & Ohio rose 1⅛ points at the opening and held on. Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific post a point or so. Metals were firm.

Used to It.

Trade developments that might have given the markets a bad case of nerves a few weeks ago now are taken in stride. No one is in any doubt as to the fact of a business recession, not even the economic managers at Washington, and therefore the market no longer reacts sharply to unfavorable industrial signs unless they point to greater severity in the decline than had been anticipated.

Railroad freight carloadings for last week, as indicated by the reports of leading carriers available today, continued to fall. The decline from the previous week was nearly 5 per cent and the freight movement, on the railroads at least, is now running fully 11 per cent under a year ago. That incidentally gives those persons who think higher freight rates will solve all the transportation problems something to think about.

Steel Industry.

In the steel industry the trade reviews continue to take a somewhat more optimistic stand than do private commentators. The Iron Age says that, except for one week in July, 1935, the steel mill operating rate is now the lowest since 1934. The industry continues to hope for an early decision on freight rates which will stimulate the placing of railroad equipment orders and it notes an improved demand for motor cars. Whether the recovery in steel which some members of the trade now predict for January takes place, there is no doubt that the fall in orders and shipments has gone much further at this time than any of them had supposed it would go.

A special contribution to the statistics was made by the National Industrial Conference Board, which found a fall of 4.3 per cent in factory employment in November as compared with October, and of 6.4 per cent compared with August. Employment was still a little ahead of a year ago, but hours of work are being reduced and the number at work has been reduced much less sharply than the volume of production.

Credit Delusions Persist.

On the financial side the market lacked news, but it had the benefit of views on credit from high authority. M. S. Szymczak, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, reviewed for the Municipal Bond Club this afternoon the theory and practice of central banking in this country. He said one thing that drew some attention, because it indicated that, in spite of the broadsides fired against the theory, it still is the belief of some members of the Federal Reserve Board that credit can be parceled and served and made to stay put at will. "It is impossible," said Mr. Szymczak, "to pursue a restraining policy with respect to the use of credit for securities' speculation at the same time an easy money policy is being pursued with respect to the use of credit for commerce, industry and agriculture."

If those aren't the exact words of spokesmen for the Federal Reserve Board in the "moral suasion" days of 1928-29, when the board, at the behest of President Hoover, was having such signal success in making credit easy for commerce while starving the stock market, some members of the Municipal Bond Club will gladly eat them for the noted Chicago member of the board. The club's speaker then proceeded to make the innocent observation that "It happens" that the present policy of ease in stock market trading "coincided with the policy of ease which the board has all along pursued in the general field of credit." Remarkable coincidence entitled to rank with the various steps taken by the Treasury this summer along with the board to overcome the new much-regretted deflationary action on reserve requirements and, perhaps, gold sterilization.

Regulation.

The skirmishing in Congress over the Wallace proposals for bigger schemes of control over production comes at a time when criticism of foreign controls is growing. A long time after the collapse of the famous Stevenson scheme for rubber control, a plan which greatly increased Dutch production at the expense of the British, the present system came into being. For a while it was pointed to as the one example of successful control—a sort of tantalizing effect given by a number of control plans in the early stages. Now the chorus of criticism is swelling. To quote from the London Financial News, critics of the rubber control committee "are making a sorry mess of their work" and "Better the old Stevenson scheme, with all its rigidity, than the present travesty of regulations." The tin control does not escape. Sir John Bagnall, chairman of the Straits Trading Co., is demanding a "drastic revision" of tin tonnages and says the committee on control needs a properly geared machine and not an eccentric one, such as it has at present.

General Motors Sets New Sales Records

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks overseas in the first ten months of 1937 totaled 305,100 units, it was announced today, the largest volume the company has ever had for that period. This represented an increase of 12.7 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Sales overseas in October amounted to 28,576 units, an increase of 24.3 per cent over the same month last year.

Am. Tel. & Tel. Votes Regular $2.25 Dividend

Other Corporations Make Extra and Higher Declarations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 17.—A regular payment of $2.25 a share on the capital stock of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., calling for disbursement of about $42,000,000 to more than 600,000 shareholders, today topped a growing list of dividend actions.

Extra and special payments to avoid the Federal surtax on undistributed earnings swelled the cash destined for distribution to shareholders in the next few weeks. The American Telephone dividend is payable January 15 to holders of record December 15.

Liggett & Myers Extra.

An extra of $2 on the common stock of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., payable December 22 to holders of record December 7, was among the day's disbursements.

U. S. Tobacco Extra.

United States Tobacco Co., with plants at Chicago, Nashville, Richmond, and Paducah, Ky., announced an extra dividend of $2 and the regular quarterly dividened of $1.25 on the common stock, both payable December 15 to stock record November 29.

Otis Elevator.

Directors of Otis Elevator Co., with plants at Buffalo, N. Y., and Harrison, N. J., declared a dividend of 60 cents a common share, payable December 20 to stock of record November 30. On September 20, 40 cents was paid.

International Salt Extra.

International Salt Co., with properties in New York, Louisiana and Michigan, ordered an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share of capital stock, payable December 15 to stock of record December 1.

Pacific Western Oil.

Directors of Pacific Western Oil Corporation declared today a dividend of 75 cents a share on the capital stock, payable December 15 to stock of record November 26. The previous payment was 65 cents in December, 1936.

Omnibus Corporation.

Directors of Omnibus Corporation, operating buses in Chicago and New York City, declared a dividend of $1.80 on the common stock, payable December 23 to stock of record December 10, the first dividend on the stock since it was issued in 1924.

Curb See-Saws In Dull Session

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Fractional gains and losses were the rule in a slow curb market today. A handful of higher-priced stocks swung a point or so in both directions.

Newmont Mining dropped 2⅛ to 62⅞ and Pittsburgh Plate Glass drifted down 2 to 83. In contrast American Cyanamid "B" advanced 1⅝ to 25¾ and Northern States Power "A" was up a point to 14.

Fractional gainers included Pan American Airways at 17¾, Pantepec Oil 5¼, Venezuela Petroleum 1⅜, Wright Hargreaves 7½, American Gas & Electric 27, American Light & Traction 14½, and Leonard Oil at ¾. A little lower were Pennroad at 2⅛, St. Regis Paper 3⅛, Aluminum Co. 85, Cities Service 2⅛, Creole Petroleum 26, Electric Bond & Share 11⅝ and Lake Shore Mines at 51¼.

Wilshire Now Chairman Of Standard Brands

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Joseph Wilshire was elevated today from president to the newly created post of chairman of the board of Standard Brands, Inc., a leading food products corporation. Thomas L. Smith, formerly first vice president, was elected president. The company said the chairman would be both executive head and chief administrative officer.

Wilshire was president of the Fleischmann Co., yeast concern, prior to its 1929 merger with other companies in the creation of Standard Brands. He started work as a yeast packer in 1898. Smith, the new president, was a 50 cents a day farm hand, then a $6-a-week grocery clerk before he became a yeast route salesman in 1894.

Lincoln Service Dinner.

Charles Delmar, president of the Lincoln Service Corporation, entertained the directors at dinner at his home yesterday evening. The guest of honor was W. David Tilghman, jr., commissioner of loans of the State banking department of Maryland.

Manufacturing Employment Drops Sharply

Recent Decline in Jobs Has Been Less Than Fall in Output.

New York, Nov. 17.—The results of a special telegraphic survey of manufacturing employment, made by the National Industrial Conference Board for consideration at its 200th meeting to be held in Chicago today, show a significant decline in the number of workers employed.

The indicated decline in employment in recent months has so far been less than the decline in manufacturing output. The reports from a number of companies cooperating in the conference board's survey indicate, however, that a considerable reduction in hours of work has also already taken place, and that further reduction in business activity will probably necessitate the laying off of more workers.

The results shown by the conference board's survey, based on information received by wire from over 1,200 companies regularly reporting pay roll data to the board, are as follows:

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The dollar, recently under pressure of outgoing foreign capital, improved its position yesterday as leading European currencies yielded some of their recent gains.

Traders saw nothing specific in the day's news to account for the reversal, but inferred it indicated a tapering of capital outflow.

The British pound lost ⅜ of a cent at $5.00¼. The French franc declined .00⅝ of a cent to around 3.40¼ cents. The belga dropped .01½ of a cent to 17.05 cents and the Swiss franc was unchanged at 23.19 cents.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Nov. 17 (AP).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—London wool prices at Tuesday's opening were off somewhat more than anticipated by some members of the Boston trade. Various estimates indicated that the decline at London from the close of the previous series was equal to or greater than the decline that has recently taken place in the Australian markets.

Boston quotations have not as yet shown any definite reaction as a result of the London decline.

Capt. Robnett Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Son of Dr. J. D. Robnett, founder of Howard Payne College at Brownwood, Tex., Capt. Robnett was appointed an officer in the Navy Pay Corps in 1900. The following year he participated in the campaigns carried on in the Philippines, and in 1914 served on the Minnesota at Vera Cruz.

Awarded a special letter of commendation for his services in the World War, Capt. Robnett also was a holder of the Philippine Campaign Medal, the Mexican Service Medal, the Victory Medal, with armed guard clasp, and the Polish decoration of Polonia Restituta.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida Murphy Robnett, of 1738 Q street northwest; a daughter, Mrs. Alfred R. Pefley, of Quantico, Va.; two sons, Vernon P. Robnett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and John D. Robnett, jr., of Rahway, N. J., and a brother, Capt. Ausey H. Robnett, Medical Corps, U. S. N., who now is on duty at the Great Lakes Training Station, Chicago.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest, followed by interment in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, Rear Admiral Charles Conard, Capt. Ray Spear, Capt. Frank T. Watrous, Capt. William H. Zane and Capt. Frank Baldwin, all of the Navy Supply Corps.

A. M. Forrester Dies at Hospital

Alexander M. Forrester, retired employe of the Government Printing Office and veteran of the Spanish-American War, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was 67.

Mr. Forrester had served with the printing office for 29 years at his retirement in 1933. Before enlisting for the Spanish War he was a linotype operator for The Washington Post. He had been a member of Harmony Lodge, F. A. A. M.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will take place in Arlington Cemetery.

Isaac Oakley, 68, Meat Broker, Dies

Isaac K. Oakley, 68, meat broker and resident of Washington for 30 years, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital.

A native of New York State, Mr. Oakley was employed by the meat packing firm of Morris & Co., here a number of years, retiring in 1929 to form his own business. He made his home at the Burlington Hotel.

Surviving Mr. Oakley are his wife, Mrs. Madge Elizabeth Oakley, a sister, Miss Doris Graham Oakley, and a daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Oakley and Christoph.

Funeral will be today at 4:30 p. m. at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will be in Newburgh, N. Y.

Charles A. Lyons Dies at Sanitarium

A son of Daniel Rufus Lyons and Susan Boswell Lyons, he was a veteran of the War with Spain and a past commander of Dewey Camp, Spanish War Veterans. He also belonged to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Abner H. Ferguson; a son, Charles A. Lyons, jr., and a granddaughter, Miss Margaret Lee Ferguson. Funeral services will be private.

Rites Held at Fort Myer For Col. Smith's Widow

Funeral services for Mrs. Hamilton Allen Smith, widow of Col. Smith, who died suddenly on Friday in San Francisco, were held yesterday in the Fort Myer Chapel. Interment followed in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Charles R. Purviance and Miss Emily B. Smith, both of Palo Alto, Calif., and Mrs. William H. Bartlett of West Point, N. Y. Two sons, Joseph H. Smith of Detroit, Mich., and Hamilton A. Smith of Sanish, N. Dak., also survive.

Requiem Mass Set For Mother Xavier

Requiem mass for Mother Xavier, who died Monday at Providence Hospital, will be celebrated this morning at 10 a. m. at the Ursuline Convent, 519 Fourth street, northwest. She had been ill one week.

Mother Mary Xavier was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1861. She was educated there in the Catholic schools and entered the Ursuline Mother House in Frostburg, Md., 28 years ago. She was professed three years later. Recently Mother Xavier celebrated her silver jubilee.

She came to Washington in 1916 when the Ursuline Mother House was moved to this city. Her Christian name was Nellie Hart. She is survived by a niece, Lillian Hart, and a nephew, William Hart, both of New York City.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Bob Burns Says—

There is nothin' so misleadin' as hearin' somebody quote just a part of somebody's speech, because whoever is doing the quoting has picked out the part of the speech that suits him.

Grandpaw Snazzy had a bitter enemy who ran a grocery store down home and one time when Grandpaw walked into the grocery store, the proprietor came up to him and says, "If you hate me so much, what'ta you come into my store for?" and Grandpaw Snazzy says "Well, I come into your store because I know I can get exactly what I want."

Now just that little speech sounds like a pretty high recommendation, but Grandpaw Snazzy went to to say "I have'ta mix some cement this mornin' and I want a little bit of sand—gimme five pounds of sugar!"

BENNY Such an Obliging Chap. By J. Carver Pusey

Europe Averse To a War Now, Says Publisher

Dictators Will Dodge Any Conflict in Which They Might Lose.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Nov. 17.—Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, speaking today at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of this city at the Emerson Hotel, declared that "at the present moment not a single European country, Germany and Italy included, want a general war." He added, "I think there is something hopeful about that fact, too."

The newspaper publisher based his statement on his findings last spring when he went abroad with Felix Morley, editor of The Post. Together they visited six capitals and other key cities in Europe and had numerous favorable opportunities to sound out sentiment in the leading countries.

Interviewed Notables.

"We had off-the-record interviews with Blum, then premier of France, and Chautemps, now premier, and Foreign Minister Delbos, who is still in the same position in the new French government," said Meyer. "We talked with the then Premier Van Zeeland, of Belgium," he continued, "and with President Benes, of Czechoslovakia.

"I had an interview with Dr. Schacht, then head of the German Reichsbank and in Vienna with Schuenigg, Prime Minister of Austria. We also had an opportunity to meet other outstanding personalities who freely gave us their views and opinions.

"I need hardly say that the general impression we received of the European situation was not very reassuring. There were and are some bright spots in the outlook. But all economic improvements are overshadowed by the possibility that these and everything else worth while in the Old World may be upset and destroyed by world war.

Every Nation Arming.

"Every nation in Europe is arming to the hilt in preparation for some unforseen and extremely dangerous eventuality. They are spending far more money for rearmament than they ever spent before. And that in itself creates a potentially serious situation for the economy of most of the countries of the Old World.

"Nevertheless, when the fact is realized that no European dictatorship is willing to chance a war on unequal terms, that is a war in which they might be defeated, the European situation appears in a more reassuring/perspecfive than it often seems to us on this side.

In conclusion, Meyer said the President's speech at Chicago was received with great interest abroad as well as at home. He finished by saying:

"As one of the leading Democratic nations against which the dictator nations are now moving, as one of the "have" nations which the have-not nations are attacking where they feel it safe to do so, we certainly have a real interest in at least declaring where we stand on illegal and wanton attack on powers that cannot defend themselves.

"Such nations have a right to rely on the signatories to treaties for some interest and help when violations of solemn agreements between nations are perpetrated."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the third concert of the Stradivari bicentennial festival in the chamber music auditorium Wednesday night. Artists: Musical Art Quartet (Sascha Jacobsen, Paul Bernard, William Hymanson and Marie Roemaet-Rosanov) and Robert McGinnis, clarinet. Program: Quintet in A major for clarinet and strings, K 581 (Mozart), Quartet in F minor, Op. 95 (Beethoven), Quintet in B minor for clarinet and strings, Op. 115 (Brahms).

A crowded auditorium was the scene last evening for the third concert in the festival commorating the bicentennial of Antonio Stradivari's death, and there was no doubt about the enjoyment with which the listeners absorbed the admirable performance by the Musical Art Quartet and Robert McGinnis, clarinetists. The one composition on the program which did not employ the clarinet was Beethoven's Opus 95, one of the two isolated string quartets which stand between the Rasumovski set and the final great series.

Because one seldom hears the clarinet quintets, the works of Mozart and Brahms received and deserved the major attention of the audience. It is a fact worth mentioning that both these quintets might not have been written had it not been for personal friendships—those between Mozart and Anton Stadler and between Brahms and Richard Muehlfeld. Mozart had no cause to feel grateful toward Stadler, who borrowed money from him and importuned him incessantly, yet it was for this sycophant that he composed the clarinet concerto and the lovely quintet.

The clarinet was a comparatively recent invention upon which Mozart seized for the value of its tone. The quintet shows how quickly he realized the possibilities of the instrument and how fully he utilized them. It is a work of peculiar charm, ideally suiting the combination of reed and string timbres, and one of the best examples of Mozart's sure sense of euphony, and his inerrant flair for finding the right mixture of voices. Blithe and spirited, the music is rich in the true sentiment of poesy.

It is interesting to note the way in which Brahms followed the technical procedure of Mozart in the treatment of the clarinet. Disparate as the content of the two works is, they are related in that one respect. It was in 1891 that Brahms composed the quintet for Muehlfeld, clarinetist in the Meiningen orchestra, whom he jocosely nicknamed "Fraeulein Klarinette." One of the most beautiful of Brahms' chamber works, it is a mature synthesis of his memories, yet for all its nostalgic feeling it abounds in a quiet joy.

Crash Fatal to 19 Blamed on Static, Cold, Low Flying

Crash of the United Air Lines transcontinental plane which fell in northeast Utah October 17, carrying 16 passengers and three crew members to death, probable resulted from three contributing causes, Secretary of Commerce Roper announced yesterday.

The Commerce Department investigating board, headed by Miller C. Foster, assistant to Assistant Secretary J. Monroe Johnson, reported that probable cause of the accident was a combination of the following three factors:

"Static conditions encountered in the last portion of the flight which rendered the reception of radio range unintelligible;

"The continuation of the flight into mountainous country at an altitude below the higher mountains without the aid of ground visibility or radio signals to definitely identify position;

Friedman Named By Ornithologists

Dr. Herbert Friedman, biologist and ornithologist of the National Museum, was elected president of the American Ornithologists Union, in the session at Charleston, S. C.

The Brewster Medal for outstanding ornithological achievement went to Dr. Robert Cushman Murphy, naturalist of the American Museum of Natural History, New York.

Mrs. Margaret Neice, of Chicago, and Dr. Ernest Mayrs, of the American Museum, New York, were named fellows of the society. Mrs. Neice is the second woman so honored by the organization. Mrs. Vernon Bailey, of Washington, was first.

Lawrence M. Hicks, of Columbus, Ohio, was named secretary to succeed Dr. T. S. Palmer, of Washington. W. L. Macatee, of the Biological Survey, was elected treasurer.

Next year's meeting, the Associated Press reported, will be held here.

Raid Reveals 'Best Racket' Is Betting On Own Tip Sheet

Two men were charged with setting up a gaming table in connection with a plant in the 900 block G street northwest, where race horse tip sheets were printed. After the sheets were printed, police said, the backers would accept bets on the tips.

Those charged and released under $1,500 bonds by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage gave their names as Edward H. Jarvins, 24, 1000 block Eighth street northwest, and Milton Arrington, 31, 1400 block Park road northwest.

In the other two raids, both in the 900 block of H street northwest, police arrested one man in each place Pete J. Gianaris, 24, 400 block Massachusetts avenue northwest, was charged with setting up a gaming table. William P. Hall, 43, 900 block H street northwest, was accused of operating a lottery. Both were released under $1,500 bonds.

Led by Sergt. George Deyoe, the raiders were Detectives William McEwen, Melvin Kite, Samuel Smith and Deputy Marshall Clayton Gasque.

Edwin Cage Wins Speaking Contest

Edwin Cage, of Dallas, Texas, won first prize in the Davis Prize Speaking contest last night at George Washington University. On the subject "We Gullible Americans," he deplored "the traditional readiness of Americans to swallow propaganda," and urged that we not permit "headlines and speeches to send us into another war that does not concern us."

Second prize was awarded to Mildred O. Vierling, who talked on "Speech Training and the University."

Raymond M. Firth won third prize for his oration, "Education for War or Peace?"

Judges were Allen H. Gardner, James G. Wingo, and Paul H. McMurray, all alumni of the University who were Davis Prize contest winners of former years. Dean Elmer Louis Kayser, winner of the prize in 1917, presided.

Rising Sun School Protest Strikers Now 'Locked Out'

Rising Sun, Ind., Nov. 17 (AP).—A strike of Rising Sun high school students—punctuated last night by bullets—became a virtual lockout today and got nowhere with its demand that Cassius Dugle, discharged janitor, be given back his job.

School authorities refused admittance to any of the 75 strikers, a group of whom was fired upon by a deputy sheriff last night, unless they brought fathers or mothers with them. Only 15 appeared at school with parents. The others roamed the streets.

Karl K. Gartner Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for Karl Knox Gartner, 51-year-old attorney, who died Tuesday, will be held today at 2 p. m. at his home, 2126 Connecticut avenue northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Born in Knoxville, Tenn., Mr. Gartner came to Washington in 1914 as an attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission. During the World War he served with the Eighteith Division in France.

Following the war, he returned to Washington and entered the practice of law and specialized in interstate commerce matters. He was the author of several articles and books dealing with problems of commerce between the States.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Kitty Beale Gartner; a brother, Allen, and his mother, Mrs. Anna M. Gartner, all of Washington.

E. W. Satterwhite Dies at Home Here

Eugene Walker Satterwhite, 62, assistant superintendent of the United States Railway Mail Service, died yesterday at his home, 3621 Everett street northwest.

Mr. Satterwhite, who was born in Rossville, Ill., entered the Government mail service in 1898 and advanced through the various grades. He had lived in Washington since 1824.

Besides his wife, a sister, Mrs. Mattie Miller, of Roosville, survives. Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral parlors and the body will be taken to Toledo, Ohio, for burial in Memorial Park Cemetery Saturday.

Mrs. Eliza Bawsel Succumbs, Aged 94

Born in Wheeling, W. Va., Mrs. Bawsel had lived in Washington since childhood. She served with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for several years, entering the Bureau at the time of the Civil War.

Later she was employed with the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions for many years. Her husband, at one time manager of Seaton Perry's store at Ninth street, and Pennsylvania Avenue northwest, died in 1911.

Funeral will be at 2.30 p.m. tomorrow at Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Rites Set Today For Mrs. Arledge

Funeral services for Mrs. Caroline Littlepage Arledge, 94, who died Tuesday at her residence, 2628 Garfield street northwest, will be held today at 3 p. m. at the All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

A resident of Washington for 47 years, Mrs. Arledge was born in King William Courthouse, Va., and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Livingston Littlepage. She would have been 95 on January 2.

She was an active member of the All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church. The first services ever held by the church's parish took place in Mrs. Arledge's home in 1911.

She is survived by two daughters, Miss Virginia L. Arledge and Mrs. Caroline A. Hunt; two sons, Hardin B. Arledge and George H. Arledge; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Miss Virginia Johnson Is Dead at Home Here

Miss Virginia Thayer Johnson, 60, a native of Oakland, Md., who had lived in Washington 25 years, died yesterday at her home, 1712 Twenty-second street northwest. She was a descendant of the distinguished Bowie and Thayer families of Maryland and a granddaughter of Reverdy Johnson, former United States Senator from Maryland and once Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

Three nephews, Bowie, Reverdy and Edward Johnson, all of Washington, survive. Funeral services will be held in Oakland, Md., where burial will take place, but arrangements were not completed yesterday.

Woman Sentenced For Beating Child Is Declared Sane

Mrs. Theresa Cronin, 32, convicted in June of beating 3-year-old William VanNess, jr., whom she cared for in return for room and board, was judged legally sane by a Police Court jury yesterday.

After the verdict, Judge Walter J. Casey ordered the woman recommitted to the District Jail for remainder of her term. She originally was sentenced to spend a year in jail and pay a $500 fine or serve another year. She could not pay the fine.

Mrs. Cron was arrested on an assault charge on complaint of the boy's mother, who told police her son was severely beaten in the VanNess home, 1500 D street northeast, for a child's prank.

Mrs. Snyder Dies; Was D.A.R. Leader

Mrs. Littie Alvis Snyder, 89, whose husband, the late Hiram Brady Snyder, served in the Civil War, and again in the World War, died yesterday at her home, 1413 Webster street northwest. She had been ill for several weeks.

A native of Indiana, Mrs. Snyder had lived here for almost 40 years. She was active in a number of organizations in Washington and was honorary regent of the Col. James McCall Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Snyder was also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, Burnside Women's Relief Corps, Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent of the Daughters Union Veterans and the Spengler Auxiliary of the American Legion.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the V. L. Speares Co. funeral home, 1009 H street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.
